WM. E. PELL, PROPRIETOR.

THADDEUS STEVENS.

Among the various estimates of Mr. Stevens' character and career, the following, which we find in the New York Herald, will, we think, generally be regarded as just:

"Thad. Stevens was unquestionably a power in the land. To him, with his intense expression of the most virulent prejudices against the originators of the unsuccessful secessionist movement, is chiefly due the delay of that restoration of the Union which was the ostensible object of our late civil war. In September, 1865, when the echoes of hostile cannon had hardly ceased to reverberate, Mr. Stevens, in a public speech at Lancaster, declared his policy of reconstruction. He held that the South had committed no treason, but was a conquered foreign power, and was therefore to be condemned to what, with a grim humor, he styled 'mild confiscation.' Of its three hundred and ninety four million acres of land, forty millions he contended should be given to the emancipated negroes in forty acres each, and the proceeds of the sale of the remainder, estimated at three thousand five hundred and forty million dollars, should be applied to the extinction of the national debt. When the President and Congress declared war against each other, Mr. Stevens became, as he continued to be to the last, one of the fiercest antagonists of Mr. Johnson. His angry shaking and snapping of the lash over the Senators whom he failed to coerce into adhesion to his impeachment policy proved more effectual with the House of Representatives. In the House of Representatives he was the acknowledged leader of the Republican members, many of whom surpassed him in ability, but none of them in audacity, and, we must perhaps allow, in sincerity. This one virtue his worst enemies must accord to him—the courage of an openly avowed hostility. The fact is that Thad. Stevens was, almost independently of his own volition, an instrument for expressing and for working out the predestined purposes of the revolution through which the American people are passing. Malevolent, even malignant, as he appeared to be and was in his capacity as a public man, his friends represent him as courteous and genial in his private intercourse with them. Publicly he was an evil, but a necessary evil, and one naturally engendered by his antecedents and circumstances. Accepted, therefore, as a topical representative of the party which recognized him as its autocrat, he must always hold a historical position.

Nor will the death of Mr. Stevens result in consequences less important and historical than the position which he held while alive. It was his marvellous obstinacy, his Hannibal-like animosity against the South, which postponed the settlement of our national difficulties. His death, however much it may be lamented by his immediate personal friends, and by his party, sounds the death knell of the extravagant hopes of the Radicals. It was he alone, whose firm will held together the most refractory among his partisans. Now that the control of his influence no longer exists, what is to hinder the disintegration of the party to which Mr. Stevens, more than any other Republican leader, had given concentration and force? His arrogance as a party leader had already received a double check in the failure of impeachment, and in the postponement of the impeachment resolutions which he revived after the arrival in Washington of several new representatives of the Southern States, whom he regarded as irrevocably committed to his own revengeful policy. While we fully recognize the talents and the strong individuality of the late Thaddeus Stevens, and even whatever merit there may be in the honesty of his open and avowed hostility, to all his opponents, we must regard his removal by death as a misfortune to his party rather than to the nation.

THE CARPET-BAGGERS.—This funny brood of obscene birds, who have taken their flight to this region, and squatted (if we may use that word in speaking of a bird) in all the counties of the State,—we wish to give or get the biography of each and all of them. We therefore desire, and we beg our friends in each county and neighborhood, to give us every possible particular relating to each of these interesting animals. We desire an exact description of the person; the size, material and contents of their carpet bags; their name or names, whether an alias or the name they had in the land they left for that land's good; the place of their nativity; when they came here; what they profess to have come for, and what they really came for; what offices they are seeking; how many poor negroes they have swindled of their last dime, and any other particulars which, being published, will enable the friends they left behind them to recognize some old acquaintances. This additional information which these facts may elicit from where they are too well known, may supply materials for the most interesting biographical dictionary ever compiled. The thought of editing this work is very refreshing to us.—Richmond Whig.

BUTLER AND A "SPOON" SCENE ON BROADWAY.—There was a scene in Broadway this afternoon such as a flaneur but seldom meets with, even in that thoroughfare. An ugly looking man came turning out of Grand Street, into Broadway, when all at once a brigade of boys, boot-blacks, errand boys, gamins and all, set up a chorus of "spoons," "stop thief," "how are you spoons," &c. &c. On turning around one readily beheld the ugly face of Benjamin F. Butler. He apparently was in at once to the epithets habitually handled about him, and his face became pale with anger as he went along the side walk with a horde of boys behind him, pointing their fingers at him, as only boys can point fingers, and calling out "spoons, spoons." Well must that man have felt miserable when, at every step he progressed, he was thus made aware how his countrymen despise him. For not the least effort was made to stop the "spoon" chorus of the boys, and every passer by, at once noticing Butler, seemed to approve of the boys' doings and enjoy the fun amazingly. Butler himself, however, soon got sick of it, could stand it no longer, and jumped into an omnibus to escape the continuance of the spontaneous demonstration.—N. Y. Letter.

An old Jew while indulging in a morsel of forbidden food, was overtaken by a terrible thunder storm, and as the thunder roared and the lightning flashed around, he cried—"Plash my soul, vot a pother apout a leetle pit of pork."

A CARD.

SEVERAL months ago I purchased the entire stock of Books and Stationery of BRANNON, HAHAM & CO., and continued the business, changing the name of my establishment to Branson & Jones, advertising myself as Proprietor and Mr. Branson as Agent. I HAS CHANGED the Directory. But as some persons seem, erroneously, to consider it a partnership, or to bind the interest of the former firm with my own, I must henceforth conduct the business upon my own responsibilities, unless some partner should be taken hereafter. Mr. Branson will continue to be General Agent for the N. C. Directory, which will necessarily engage a portion of his attention.

I shall be pleased to furnish our friends and the public with BLANK STATIONERY, SHEET MUSIC and other articles in our line, at lowest cash prices.

Grocery and Commission Business!

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to carry on, at his old stand on Fayetteville, near Hargett street, the Grocery and Commission Business in the various branches.

He will always keep on hand everything usually found in a FIRST CLASS Family Grocery establishment. Those in the country in the produce line, will find it to their interest to call before disposing.

The stringency of the times compels him to adopt, strictly,

THE CASH SYSTEM!

Do not, therefore, send orders, or write, or make application for credit.

He will pay prompt attention to and make regular returns in accounts of sales of PRODUCE, to be sold on COMMISSION.
