The Daily Sentinel.

VOL. IV. RALEIGH, N. C., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1868. NO. 45.

The Daily Sentinel.

WM. B. PELL, PROPRIETOR.

From the Baltimore Gazette.

SCANDALOUS OUTRAGE OF A SOUTHERN RADICAL JOURNAL.

While it is our earnest desire at all times to exclude from the columns of the Gazette, everything that savors of brutality and blackguardism, it sometimes becomes our duty to vindicate the truth and the right by exposing to public indignation what is low and vile. We must, therefore, now call attention to an extract from an editorial article in the Raleigh Standard, a sheet which is the organ of Holden, the bogus Governor of North Carolina. The article is entitled "Work," and it concludes thus:

[Here follows the infamous article.]

How much more of oppression and of insult, we calmly ask, are the people of the South expected still to bear? Ruled over by negroes and by white adventurers or renegades, who could not command the votes of five citizens out of a hundred throughout the State, the Southern people are told to submit in silence to be defamed and lied about in the North, and to hear their wives and daughters addressed in foul and scurrilous language at home. It is not strange that, as a correspondent writes, "this last article has aroused a terrible sensation all through North Carolina." * * * But the admirable spirit of forbearance which the Southern people have heretofore manifested under such unparalleled and trying circumstances will, we are sure, be exhibited until, in the eyes of the civilized world, forbearance will no longer appear to be a virtue. Millions of free-born American citizens cannot be forced to submit forever to despotism, to persecution, and to fraud, and the low ruffians who have crawled into power in the South are, by their violence and falsehoods, scattering broadcast the germs of a whirlwind which, if they persist in their present course, they are destined inevitably to reap.

THE BEST OF THE ARGUMENT.

[From a Late Speech by Mr. Pendleton.]

"As I was travelling in the East, the other day, I heard a dispute going on between two men in the railroad car. One of them had a big burly voice. I was a little modest, and when I heard the dispute going on I did not look back, but I do not see a man on the stand big enough to own such a voice. [Laughter.] He was a Republican, and had lost his temper. The other man had a weazened squeaking voice, that might have belonged to a girl. The subject of the Convention at New York came under discussion. I heard the big voice say—if the ladies will excuse me, I will use the very language that he did, though it is not very fit for ears polite, and I was shocked that Puritan New England should endure such language in public:

"Every rebel at the South will vote for Seymour and Blair." [Laughter.]

"Well," says the little fellow, "I wish they would; it is the first sensible thing I have heard of their doing in ten years."—[Laughter and cheers.]

That only made our Republican friend a little more angry. He said:

"Every d—d thief in the country will vote for Seymour and Blair." [Laughter, and cries of "Butler."] There is no telling what Butler will do if he sees we are going to win. [Laughter.] The little fellow answered:

"I hope they will; it only shows that they have stolen enough, while they are now come to repentance and a better heart."

Says the other: "South Carolina will vote for Seymour and Blair."

"Well," says the little fellow, "South Carolina is getting along very well, if you will only let her alone. My experience in life has always been that it is easier to coax a dog with a beefsteak than to entice him with a stick." [Laughter.]

I concluded that my little Democratic friend had got the better of that argument, and answered satisfactorily all the talk we hear about the rebels we have in the Democratic party. Instead of being sorry they are there, I am glad of it; I wish there had been more of them, for I believe, as General Grant said, when he made his report the fall of 1865, they bear with patience the result of defeat, and are prepared to be now loyal citizens in peace, as they were brave enemies in war. [Cheers.]

THE CARPET BAGGER.—A carpet-bagger is rarely found in the society of white men. He is most at home where negroes most do congregate. He eats and drinks with negroes. Sometimes he sleeps with him.—Until reconstruction changed his mode of life, he relied upon no honest pursuit, calling, or profession. In the eyes of the law he was a vagrant, for he had no visible means of support. He taxed the negroes in one way or another for bread and meat and wearing apparel and a little loose change. The ignorance and credulity of the poor negro were his main stay. With the execution of the reconstruction laws he loomed into importance. The vagrant and sharper of the day before became a political leader. He registered votes; he conducted elections; he was a member of the Convention; he framed the Constitution; he is a member of the Legislature, or a Probate Judge, or a Clerk of a Court, or a Sheriff, or Lieutenant Governor, or a member of Congress, or United States Senator. His pockets are full. He is a ruler in the land. And now, having been lifted up by negro votes, and finding the negro is becoming tired of his hypocrisy and deception and will not trust him any longer, he is in favor of depriving the people of the choice of their officers, and in order to secure the interference of the United States to retain him in the place he has fraudulently obtained, he resorts his position to give weight and credit to the most atrocious falsehoods about the sentiments, feelings, and conduct of the people.

This is an imperfect sketch of a carpet-bagger. There are thousands in the South who fill the bill. They are the only class of the population we can spare. We should rejoice with exceeding great joy to be rid of them. They will only stay here until the laws are fairly enforced and the Courts fairly at work. The most of them have made themselves liable to the penalties of the law. They will soon emigrate. We wait with patience the day of our deliverance.—Exchange.

Says Mr. Prentice: "We publish this morning a sketch from the New York World about the carpet-baggers. It gives the personnel of all of them, and a sorry set they are. It affords us great satisfaction to know that we are not a member of Congress."
