The National Debt.

Long after the question of reconstruction and freedmen's bureaus have been consigned to oblivion, the national debt, with its responsibilities and burdens, will be the difficulty of politicians. President Johnson's letter to General Ewing on this subject contrasts the six teen years of the last four years with the economical administration of the seventy-two years preceding the rebellion in such a way as to put it beyond doubt that a change must take place if the country is to be saved from bankruptcy.—It seems almost incredible that the expenditure incurred within the short period since the rebellion should represent a sum almost equal to that of the seventy-two years preceding it. Surely no denunciations can be more eloquent than the naked figures that thus demonstrate the mal-administration of the Radicals. The purchase money of Russian America is no doubt a considerable item in our recent expenditure; but in the period previous to the rebellion there are still heavier expenses of an extraordinary character to be taken into consideration.

Louisiana, Florida and California were purchased from France, Spain and Mexico at a still heavier expense, and during that period a three years' war with Great Britain, another with Mexico of shorter duration, and numberless Indian wars helped to swell the national expenditure. We can find no set-off in the period since the war comparable with these. Extravagance and corruption have been a heavier drain upon the country than the purchase of Russian America or the many pensions doled out to the widows and orphans of our soldiers. If the radicals saved the Union they have materially checked the prosperity of the country. "Your money or your life" was the unpleasant alternative put to the republic, which, between the Confederates and the radicals, seems to have fallen into very bad company.

Mexico, Canada and Cuba are still wanting to swell the greatness of our resources and make all North America ours; but so long as such burdens of taxation are imposed on the people we cannot expect that they will drop willingly into our arms. In the midst of peace our expenditure is upon a war footing. What would it be if some unforeseen circumstance involved us in a European war? Either bankruptcy or defeat, unless retrenchment be carried out with the most unsparing severity and a disinterested patriotism that looks more to the common good than the interests of party.

Our financial mismanagement has indeed brought the country to a crisis scarcely less dangerous than when the first shot fired at Fort Sumter inaugurated the civil war.—Then the vacillating policy of the Democratic leaders compelled the people to support a radical government, and were the exclusion of the Democrats from office the only result we should say, "Served them right." But with Radical power came Radical plunder; and the amount of treasure thus robbed from the people has burdened us with a national debt which cannot be repudiated without disgrace, and which, if we hope ever to liquidate, we must at once set about putting the government expenses on a peace basis and detecting and punishing corruption wherever it may be found.—N. Y. Herald.

THE STEALING OF SECURITIES.

The frequent and daring robberies of securities and other valuables, by thieves who are permitted to hover around the most active haunts of business in New York, and suddenly snatch their prey from the hands of their victims, or from some temporary place of deposit, have called forth considerable discussion, as well as suggestions for relief, in the press of that city.—The police of New York are accused of being much more severe and expert in using their cudgels upon poor inebriates or fallen women,—whom, with a virtuous imagination that scorns to take cognizance of any legal rights in such beings, they pound almost out of the semblance of humanity—than they are in protecting the public from the depredations of notorious felons, whom they permit to intrude themselves, unwatched, in the heart of business places, and who often escape with their booty with very little difficulty. It is even stated that when these rascals have run off with a pile of valuables, they are negotiated with by the members of the preventive and detective departments, and treated with as distinguished consideration as if they were brother artists of the same profession. Various suggestions for the protection of valuables are made, one of which is recommended by a correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce, as practiced by himself, viz: the enclosure in a bag and locking in a safe when not in use, and the custody of the key to lock the bag in his hand when taken out of the safe for any purpose. It is apprehended, however, the difficulty is not to be remedied by a change of system. It is said that the careless betting which has resulted from the immense daily transactions in securities can be rectified, the losses will continue under any form of manipulation. The safe deposit companies are of the utmost value in affording security from burglars and from fire, but when bonds, moneys, etc., are in transits among dealers, only circumspect precautions and careful observation by the police, and honest, prompt efforts to catch rogues, can effect any safety.—Bull. Sun.

Persons unaccustomed to drinking tea are aware of the peculiar sleeplessness which follows an indulgence in the beverage. This effect is due to an alkaloid which exists in tea, known by the name of theine. A medical student in Boston recently tried some experiments with this substance, the result of which he thinks as follows:

"I took myself theine gr. xii., at about 2 P. M., by the mouth, and about two hours after there came on a state of great physical restlessness, and at the same time a very uneasy state of mind, which Lehmann describes in this connection, as a "mental anguish." Soon after, there was a tremulousness, most marked in my hands and arms. On attempting to write and control the muscles of the hand, the hand trembled so violently that it was impossible to write with any regularity, nor could it be restrained for more than a few seconds. My mind was also in an excessively uncomfortable and anxious state, which admitted not the slightest rest, whether fast or slow, or attempted reading. This lasted, perhaps, two hours, when there were no other phenomena, except drowsiness, until 2 A. M., having gone to bed at 10. Meanwhile, the mind was in a state of most active and persistent thinking, in spite of all attempts at forgetfulness."
