THE GREAT EARTHQUAKE.

Some in the City of San Francisco.

San Francisco, Oct. 17.—The most destructive earthquake that has ever visited the great city of California, and which caused so much damage and dismay, was equal to this. Former earthquakes had to do with the unfinished houses, and the houses were not so high as they are now. The force of the shock increased with the increasing population and magnificence of the city. It may seem as if a convulsion which completed only a few seconds of time, but it was a convulsion that shook the earth to its center, and saw its center tremble as if it were a strong man who had been struck by a more violent than he had ever known. The violence of the shock was such that the subterranean structures were to have sprung themselves, and to have been thrown into the air, and at that point every clock in San Francisco stopped, and the buildings were so shaken that the day had hardly begun. Workers were going about their business, the stores were open, many people were at breakfast, and some were at work, when suddenly, without warning, and accompanied by no noise from the ground, every building began to shake as if it were being set on wheels, and dragged rapidly over a plain of glass. The shock was so violent that the houses were thrown into the air, and many people were killed. The shock was so violent that the houses were thrown into the air, and many people were killed. The shock was so violent that the houses were thrown into the air, and many people were killed.
