EXTRACTS FROM A LETTER FROM A NORTH CAROLINIAN NOW TRAVELING IN EUROPE.

[The following interesting extracts from a letter from a North Carolinian traveling in Europe to a friend in Wilmington, which we find in the Journal, will be read with interest. The writer of the letter is an estimable citizen of Raleigh:]

DRESDEN, (SAXONY,) Nov. 9, 1868.

My Dear ——:

We propose to write you a few lines in regard to Europe as it appears to us. But before we begin, let us make a little request of you, that you will take pity on us and let us see your hand writing. * * *

We will probably receive it at Rome, when if you have any ghostly petitions for our Father, the Pope, write them out, and we will be most happy to have them properly presented to his Holiness.

Since writing you, we have sat with our feet ankle deep in Summer snow on Gorne ghat (9,604 feet above the sea) and viewed twenty-one snow peaks and the Matterhorn towering above us and ten glaciers below us. We were detained by a storm four days in the Simplon Pass by an Alpine storm, which so destroyed the great Simplon road that we had to clamber over avalanches and through new made beds of mountain torrents on foot to reach Lake Magiore.—We took a skiff in the streets of an Italian village, for the first stories of the houses were under water, and rowed through beautiful groves and came near being wrecked upon a mile-stone on the Simplon road.—We took a steamer, and, passing the Barromean Islands, reached the cars by a row boat at Arona, having seen an inundation greater than has been known for five hundred years.

We passed two or three days at Milan, and enjoyed two or three hours among the three thousand statutes on the pinnacles and spires of the Dome. We re-crossed the Alps on the wonderful Mont Ceres Railroad, which, having more dangers to provide against, seems one of the safest roads in the world. We arrived in time at Berne to see the wonderful glow of the Bernese Alps at sundown, for they look as if they were mountains of white glass, lit from a fire within. We heard the sound of human voices in a funeral dirge, the whistling of the wind, the thunder of the storm, all produced by a skilled hand upon the wonderful Fribourg Organ. We sailed through the Lake of Thun; we heard the Alpine horns in the valley of Lauterbrunnen; we felt the mist at the bottom of the 960 feet of the Staubach Falls, and came over the Brunig Pass, to see the Lion of Lucern. We set our watches by the Strasbourgh clock; we saw, but did not feel, the silver claws of the Tiger at [illegible] specie to the Jew at Frankfort; examined the boat-mills at Mayence, and with a bottle of wine and basket of grapes, we sat sail on the Rhine. The guide-book mentions the location of Cæsais bridge, the memories of Russian, French and Swedish heroes who fought, bled and died on its banks, but what is visible to us is its quaint old castles, its railroad on each bank, with the ornamented tunnels, vine-clad hills, its thousands of river craft, the active living Present. We first realized the rigor of the present Prussian Government, when we saw large numbers of men engaged in improving the channel of a river which has been navigated for three thousand years.

At Cologne we saw the sluggishess of the past with the activity of the present. On the one hand the far-famed Cathedral, whose towers are to be 500 feet, have reached only 160, after 500 years of labor and begging. On the other hand you see the Rhine spanned by an iron bridge, the creation of two years, whose splendor you may imagine when I tell you that each end is surmounted by an equestrian bronze statue, that each statue must have cost twenty thousand dollars.

At the shrine of the 11,000 Virgins of Cologne, we fully realize that the superstitions of the past are yet in full force. The walls of this huge Church were filled with bones, the ceilings were frescored with bones; from the thousand openings in the gilded gratings peeped human skulls, each with its velvet band and the "oretur's" name worked in gold; bushels of human teeth, basket of thorns from our Saviour's Crown, and a piece of the real cross. These people, and the learned fathers who exhibited them, looked as it they expected us to believe all this, and that these were the bones of the people who died fourteen hundred years ago.

At Berlin we saw the present King, a handsome, vigorous looking old man, who works every day as hard as any of his subjects. We saw thousands of his soldiers, who were remarkably handsome and intelligent looking, their dress and equipment of the best material. About his soldiers there was no appearance of show, even the button was plain polished gilt, the helmet, of polished leather, surmounted by a brass point. The country roads are all macadamized, the land splendidly cultivated, and at this season we saw thousands of mounds, which held the crop of sugar beets; the number and size of these mounds showing what an amount of vegetable matter must have been produced. Col. Fremont, I wish that you could examine the Cologne and Berlin railway. It is double tracked, and in the 393 miles you will not find one battered rail, nor one defective cross tie. The locomotives do not show a piece of brass nor an ornament of any kind. We saw a twenty five ton locomotive drawing 63 loaded cars, and loads that you would not put on your cars—cars 32 feet long, 3 pair of wheels, without trucks, moving fifty miles an hour—it is so steady that you can write with ease. The road is manned by men who have been soldiers, and who execute orders as they are given with promptness. This road pays 13 per cent. If we had the money and the business, with our grades, we could do likewise. Plant grapes, and the business and money will come. You have often heard it said that "there was plenty more Dutchmans in Holland;" you have no idea how many Germans there are in Germany who want to go to America, and they want to go to America to own land. Here land is worth $600 to $2,500 an acre. They do not want to go there to cultivate cotton, cota or tobacco; they want to cultivate what they are accustomed to—vegetables and grapes. Hundreds will come, if you will pay them part in land, part in money. The cost of their transportation will be about forty dollars ahead, and they would not expect more wages than you now pay for the poor labor you hire; but they must have the assurance that their children will be well off.

London is now supplied abundantly with fresh fruit and grapes from Spain. Berlin is supplied from Hungary. The ice that is used in Paris and Marseilles is brought from the glaciers of the Alps, near the Rhine, above the Lake of Geneva. The oats that feed the traveler's horse in the Alps, are brought from Hungary, and his bread is made from wheat grown in California.—Why, with your climate and soil, and railroad connections, can you not supply the cities of the North with grapes, wine and vegetables? Land that here is worth $2,000 an acre is cultivated in grapes and a new-made wine is sold for 30 cents a gallon. I have yet to see the traveler who makes his dinner without his bottle of wine. I have yet to see, except on one occasion, a drunken man, and that was not really in a grape district. Millions of barrels of wine will not supply the demand for wine in America, if we can make it cheap.

Our route now lies through Southern Germany, Hungary, and thence to Italy. We will be happy to write you again, provided you write to us and let us know that our letters are acceptable.

THE EXERCISES OF THIS INSTITUTION will be resumed on Monday, the 4th of January next, under the direction of Miss MARGARET R. MITCHELL, as Principal, aided by Mrs. E. N. GRANT, and other competent instructors.
It is the determination of the Trustees and Principal that this shall be a School of the best grade. No other guaranty of its character will be asked by those who know Miss Mitchell and Mrs. Grant. But the Trustees deem it right to state that these ladies are daughters of the late Professor Mitchell, of Chapel Hill, and were educated by their father with a view to the profession of teaching; and that they combine, with unusual attainments, a happy faculty for imparting instruction, and a thorough devotion to the business, which they have prosecuted with success for some years.
The undersigned, on behalf of the Principal, will furnish circulars stating terms, &c., on application.

He is between six and seven years old, about 15 hands high, light sorrel color, thin mane, the hair on the end of his tail has been cut off, making it shorter than natural, the hoof of one hind foot is smashed, and one of his front hoofs has a scratch in it, showing the shoe; he has a star in the forehead, a white spot on his head, on the right side, where the head-stall covers; the hair has been rubbed from the underside of his jaw, on one side; he has been newly shod, and the hair lately cut from his bellocks. He is a fast walker, paces and jogs under the saddle. A nearly new black leather halter, a much worn black horse blanket, lined with brown and red cloth, were on him, and went with him.
