WHAT A CONTRAST!

THE CARPET-BAG REGIME IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE.

In Washington, writing letters for his paper, the Conservative, I find the following sketch of the United States Senate, as he finds it today, will be read with interest:

CARPET-BAGGERS.

Entering the gallery to the Senate Chamber on Thursday afternoon, after an absence of six months from its sacred precincts, the first fact that struck itself upon my notice was that the proprie's attire of Mr. Seward, as to the "vacant chair," had been almost effaced. We all remember with what touching pathos the venerable and variable Senator alluded to these "vacant chairs" at an early stage of the late sectional conflict; and how he hoped the erring brethren would come back and fill them. Well, the erring brethren haven't come back to any perceptible extent, but the vacant chairs are filled, nevertheless. And what a "fill" is there, my countrymen!

There is no need of any searching investigation into personal histories to reveal the style of men these carpet-baggers are. It requires no very astute student of human nature to pick them out one by one as they are to be seen to which they have no more right than George Francis Train to the British throne. Gail is to the kingdom of Heaven, or Ben Butler to the powers he uses his voice with. You can tell them at a glance by the look of out-of-placeness of which they cannot dispense themselves let them try ever so hard. They are seated on the outer edges of the chamber-halls and there wherever a seat could be found; or some made to put one in. The position was to claim a gilt horse, but they had heard of the injunction against looking such an animal in the mouth, so Wheeler, of Alabama, squat contentedly and gloomily on the extreme right, and bemoans about "the people of my State." Directly opposite, and so near the door that it is apt to be mistaken for a member, one of the "honorable" members from Arkansas unfolds himself to public gaze, and every now and then rises to present a petition from a constituency he never saw, and in behalf of a State he never lived in—and so on to the end of the chapter. But the carpet-baggers of the Senate will soon despatch this matter of contempt.

When the first flush of reconstruction enthusiasm is over, they will cease to have respect even of the Radicals, whose political importunities they are. "How do you like carpet-baggers?" said to a Radical Sena- tor yesterday—this, they have behaved so well as could be expected," said he, putting into tone a good deal more than was in his words; and which I construed in the form of appendix; thus: "They must keep their peace and not put on any airs, or we'll teach them manners."
