(Special to the Louisville Courier-Journal.)

NASHVILLE, Feb. 9.—The sensation of the season was produced in the Legislature to-day, by the most startling disclosures in connection with the missing school fund.

It had been surmised for a long time that there was a great deal of baseness at the bottom of the whole business, but nobody, outside of those implicated, imagined the extent of the bribery, corruption and wholesale swindling made up in the history of the stolen fund. It will be remembered that several weeks since Butter, President of the Tennessee National Bank of Memphis, where the school fund was placed, was arrested and a committee appointed by the House to make a thorough investigation.

That committee, composed of fearless and impartial men, aided by the best legal talent in Nashville, made its report to-day, bringing to light the most damning disclosures, and implicating scores of State officials most of whom were members of the House at the time the funds were spirited away. The principal witnesses who testified before the committee were Butter himself and his head lobby agent, named Parham. In addition, some score of letters and telegrams were presented, nearly all having a bearing on the corrupt influences brought to bear on the Legislature.

Standing out among the most prominent of those who were bribed stands S. M. Arnett, present member of Congress, and who was then a member of the legislature and well known as the author of the Tennessee franchise law. Two other members of Congress, Mallins and Nunn, who were then members of the House, also, according to the most ample testimony, received bribes, but they were not as deep in the villainy as Arnett. The latter's name figures largely through the testimony and correspondence, it being clearly proven that he pocketed $5,000 at one haul. Mallins was for sale engaged for, on receiving $500 cash, he indulged in the following rhapsody when dining a bowl of whisky punch with Parham:

"Tell Butter that I remember him as a lovely spot in memory's waste, as the shadow of a great rock in the desert, as the rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valley; and so are the cedar in among the trees of Lebanon as I butter among men."

It was proven by Butter that Mallins received a very large sum to buy others, and as the money was never accounted for afterwards, the virtuous Congressman is to be prosecuted if he does not inform how the money was expended. Butter, at the instance of the Committee, wrote to him two weeks ago, but had got no answer yet.

Judging from the testimony, about one-half of the members of the House must have been bribed, but the negotiations were carried on in such a way as to make it appear that the money was being borrowed. A single cent, however, was never paid back.

The Metropolitan Bank of Washington was somehow mixed up in the matter to the extent of $100,000, which it secured.

The testimony proved that outside of the Legislature thirteen thousand dollars was expended for influences brought to bear on that body, and probably members of the Legislature received as high as forty or fifty thousand dollars. The testimony covers about 500 pages of foolscap. It is hard to imagine what action the Legislature will take in the premises, but it is pretty certain that the stolen fund will not be recovered, so looking over the testimony and causes pendente, it is somewhat amazing to see how beautifully bribery and loyalty are blended together, and with what charming naïve Arnett talks about promoting the good cause of Radicalism, while he pocketed his thousands of stolen lucre.

A NIGHT HORROR IN A LUNATIC ASYLUM—SHOCKING MURDER ON BLACKWELL'S ISLAND.

The "Lodge"—by which application the small three-story building set apart for the worst or most rabid of the lunatics, on the west end of this island, is known—was the scene of a most shocking affair some time during Friday night last, by which the life of a poor delirious creature was taken by another in a moment of frenzy, and the dead was mainly owing to the apparent mismanagement of the authorities in not properly guarding against the danger to which the inmates of the institution are at present so much exposed. The facts are as follows: There are about 1,300 inmates in the four structures set apart for lunatics on the island in question, all of which are occupied, the "Lodge" being filled to repletion. The accommodations here are so meager that it has been found necessary for several months past, in order to meet the demands of the increase in the number of unfortunate, to cause their sleeping two in a cell, instead of one as heretofore, when the patients are dangerous and liable to do bodily harm to one another. Each of these apartments is furnished with an iron bedstead and a wooden tub, or "kidd," of heavy oak, such utensils being essential. The patients are locked up in their rooms at six o'clock each evening, and remain so until six o'clock the next morning. On Friday night one of the female lunatics confined to this department arose from her couch, and in a paroxysm of madman seized the heavy tub at the sides of the couch, and raising it above her head brought it down with such force upon the skull of her sleeping comrade, crushing it and killing her instantly. The shrieks and lamenting in the lunatic asylum are so familiar to the ears of those here as to go almost little notice, as every time during the night, hence, if any noise was made by the inmates in their stupor, was any noticed. At six o'clock the attending keeper of the ward in which the horrid crime transpired threw open the door of the cell, and was her born in beholding the mortal murderer and her murdered comrade lying side by side in their gore, a ghastly spectacle indeed. The bed clothing was saturated with blood, which dripped slowly from the pendant covering and streamed over the floor of the room, while the brains of the dead woman, which had been literally torn out with the efforts of the murderer, lay scattered about and dismembered the tubs. The dead man who was buried immediately under the debris, and the circumstances of enacting the affair were kept strictly private to elude the observation even of nearly every one about the place. The remains of the deceased, whose name has not transpired, were buried quickly and expeditiously, and were interred without delay. She was about twenty-six years of age, and had neither friend nor relative living in this vicinity. The murderer is of course irreconcileable for the act.

The facts narrated above have been obtained from an employee of the asylum, but the names of the parties concerned in the tragedy were not disclosed.—Herald.
