IMPERIALISM-RADICALISM.

Radicalism, Imperialism—these two twin brothers, or rather, parent and child are now plainly the issue with which the American people are forced to contend.

We have long suffered, and we think not altogether unprofitably, to show that the issue of the dominant party, despotic always to the uttermost limit, that it dared to go, was towards a governmental despotism. That we did not judge wrongly, and that we did not charge home to the party with undue severity, is manifest in recent developments, and especially in the open efforts now being made by the Union League, the secret council of the Radical party, to change the form of our Government from that of a republic to an empire.

We are not surprised at the opening out of this imperial bud. As we have said many times before, the seed of something like it has been sown, and it is a law of nature, as well as of cause and effect, that every seed must bring forth fruit after its kind. For years past the Republic has had full and untrammelled sway, and planted what seed it would, and nourished it with blood. All revolutions in government are preceded by Revolution. Nay, all revolutions are Radicalism carried out to its logical result; and Radicalism, it allowed to develop itself, usually leads to revolution. This is a universal law, that apply to other nations, and to other times should not be applied to our nation and to our times. To subvert our fundamental law and break up our Federal Union is Radicalism. This Radicalism is revolution. This revolution is an inevitable step before imperialism. Imperialism is now advocated by those that overthrow the Constitution, destroy the Union, brought about by the Union League, by Radicalism—by Radicalism. And it is advocated by some others, tolerated by some others. Some others would have it—would submit to it. All others oppose it—condemn it. All the instincts of the American people, as a mass, are in deep rooted antagonism to it. Their feelings, their prejudices, their reason, their experience hold it in abhorrence, and would condemn it, without a moment's delay, if it were not for the fact that it is the apostle and follower of Radicalism, a fraction of the American people, that dare to do or desire to do it, or to bring it about. This desire has been showing itself for years. Extremes, ruling recklessly, have indicated it. Oversteering the boundaries of law is the first important step towards all governmental overthrow. Overthrowing law, and defying law, and encroaching on the rights of others, under the dominion and under the legislation of the party in power, became a habit. Of course some plausible pretext was given from time to time for everything of this kind done. The excuse was changed as the occasion called for. With artifice were the American people blinded and misled. A cloak of some kind was always necessary, and a cloak was always had. Behind this cloak, or which were emblazoned in self-asserting consciousness the delicate notions of loyalty, liberty, emancipation—on which should have been inscribed hatred, revenge, treachery—was the premeditated betrayal of republicanism plotted and brought into a systematic, settled purpose; and now that purpose is in the process of being carried out with a corner of the curtain raised, as typified in the Imperialist newspaper started by the Union League in New York, and the Empire, started by the Union League in Philadelphia.

As we before remarked, we are not surprised at this. We have felt and foreseen that something of the kind was approaching. Arbitrary power, when once grasped by a political party and used for years, never surrenders without a fight. Power is a thing insatiable and ambitious beyond all things, and desperate when pushed to an extremity. It is the worst of tyrants, and that by virtue of which they dare to tread upon their subjects with a heavy heel. Power covers the outlaw, the crown and crucifies the king, and takes from a people their country. Power tramples upon law, sets States from the maps, casts citizens arbitrarily into dungeons, and takes from them their citizenship. Such power, so used, have the Radical party, with the latest ambition and revolutionary aim of tyrants, by force and fraud possessed themselves of. They have long resolved not to surrender it without a desperate struggle. They are that to continue, to hold it, and to exercise it is utterly inconsistent with the existence of the Republic, which is presumed to rest upon common consent, and to yield the greatest good to the greatest number. An empire, therefore, a Government of power, is the shape into which they propose to convert the American institutions, thinking thereby to keep their place, and to rule by hereditary, if not by divine right. They have everything in their own hands, (they reason) and they think by this means to keep it there. To this end, long contemplated, they have strengthened themselves by secret societies and combinations of all kinds, by monopolies of every conceivable description, by vast means of communication, by the half-draming, unsuspecting masses, whom shouts of loyalty and the cant of patriotism have been deceived; by a large standing army, and by such other methods and means, seen and unseen, which is their reach. By the old Democratic cry—the theory of the Constitution, and cry—the theory of the Government was formed and conducted until the calamitous success of the Radical imperial party—power were distributed to the extremes, and for wise purposes, which from setting around the heart, the Federal Government, last, as there was every reason to fear, it should some day prove disastrous. The Radical imperial party, on the contrary, have set on the way, spreading power to that of drawing it very gradually from the center, making a consolidated government, a strong government, an oligarchical government, a government for the few, not for the many, a centralized government, vested with power never intended, plainly asserted, and wholly inconsistent with a republican government, such as the founders created. Having done this, they have done the fabric which the measure, torn down the fabric which the nation built, and in which tree and prairie, and happy generations have dwelt, they have laid, or are laying, a foundation of their own, with centralization as the chief corner stone, upon which they propose to erect a superstructure of imperialism, into which they hope, by some means, by legislating words, by some means, to convert the people, with themselves as lords and masters—National Intelligencer.
