THE DRIFT AGAINST THE PEOPLE.

One of the most marked features of these disordered times, and one of the worst omens for the time to come, is the fact that the entire drift of things, politic and economic, is against the people. This is an era of great combinations, large monopolies, and generally of mighty things, but all the might, the combinations, the monopolies are against the people—against their interests, their security, their well-being—and serve and were designed to strengthen, prop up, and magnify favored classes. It needs no great penetration or thought to foresee that such a tendency, carried to its full logical results, must be deeply injurious to the public welfare, for it is to be remembered that that welfare depends upon the prosperity of the great mass of the people, and not upon the prosperity of the comparatively few. The last few years have been years of amazing wealth to large numbers of individual men, and upon it they have grown fat and insolent and powerful, and that fatness, insolence, and power of the few comparatively are used to oppress, override, and impoverish the many. This is the natural tendency of vast wealth in the hands of small minorities, against which great majorities—the multitude—have to fight, with tremendous odds against them. This begets a constant war between wealth and poverty, between the opulent bondholder and the struggling taxpayer, between the great body of the people and the favored few, made proud, over-bearing, ambitious, and dictatorial by riches, and begetting at the same time a spirit of authority and absolutism which ill comports with the boasted equality and simplicity of Americans and American ideas. This spirit is now running away with us as a nation, and is working incalculable injury in many ways, and in every shape in which its power is felt bears down heavily and unjustly upon the people. Against this prevailing and growing spirit the people as such—the many—need protection, and it is one of the first duties of a statesman, or any one who has sagacity enough to deserve that title, to undertake it. If he does not at least strive to give such protection, he knows not his office or his place, and is unfaithful to the trust committed to him, which is, in part at least, to keep up the balance of power between the rich and the poor, to shield the people from the aggressions of ambitious wealth, and to see to it that they are not overborne by rising combinations of power of any kind.

We find some excellent thoughts on this subject in a recent issue of the Round Table, (Radical,) which we quote from as follows, showing the class of men that become our rulers, and how, and the consequences to the great body of the people:

"Some of them carry their devil-may-care aspirations to new Territories and sow the seed of empire far West, anticipating the time when the West joins again the far East; returning after awhile to their old homes, some to the Senate, others to the House, others to speculations in Wall street, brimful of the freebooter's spirit; and, while they play on the thousand-stringed harp of the demagogue, striving in truth for booty, spoils, power, self. Thus, while everywhere on this vast continent, from Maine to Nevada, from Georgia to Alaska, from Wall and State streets to the gold and silver mines of California and Colorado, a few strong men, more daring, lucky, and successful than the rest, got the upper hand, leagued together with Congressmen for railways and other monopolies, and actually are the rulers of the country, because they control its legislation and handle its resources, the so-called middle classes, who in Europe keep up the balance of social power, are fast disappearing among us, and gradually merging with the masses of the poor, the rich becoming richer, the poor poorer.'

"Meanwhile, too, the principles of humanity, so much dwelt upon by our rhetoricians, demagogues, and gushing journalists, are practically so commonly violated in trade that last week a Boston shopkeeper did not shrink from coolly telling Dr. Lyvin that, with the starvation wages which he doles out to his workwomen, and with the recumbent position in which they are confined during their labors, the poor creatures became cripples for life after two or three years' service! In truth, on close examination of many of the business establishments in this Republic, it will be found that the promise of happiness held out by the Declaration of Independence to the children of Columbus too often vanishes as soon as they seek honest employment. Some philosophers think that as this has always been so it must continue to be, but surely we who talk so much about freedom should look to its effects, and when we find the weaker classes no better protected against the strong by democracy than by less happy systems, and being still worse, inasmuch as they are expected to find in political sentimentalities a compensation for their sufferings, it behooves the thinkers of the age to turn aside from abstractions and glittering generalities, and to concentrate their attention upon concrete facts.

There are certainly bright spots in our civilization—such as the deeds of charitable men, who vest their fortunes in public institutions, and who endow libraries, colleges, and churches. But it is not charity that is so much needed, nor meteoric freaks of princely magnanimity, as greater justice in the daily business intercourse between fellow beings. When the general animus is that of unscrupulous hardness and greed, and when the rich man acquires his wealth by grinding the life out of thousands of laborers upon whose toil he rides to fortune, the good which is done by wholesale charities has only the effect of a death-bed repentance, and works the evil of making the poor depend upon benevolence when their self-respect demands—that they should depend solely upon justice."—Nat. Intelligencer.

The Courts has been busily engaged on the State docket during the past week.—The most important case was that of the State vs. Andrew Davis, colored, charged with the burning of Dr. Presley's house. The State was represented by Col. Jno. F. Hoke and Judge Osborne, and the defendant by Hons. N. Boyden and J. H. Wilson. After patient investigation and able arguments, both for and against, the jury rendered a verdict of guilty.—Char. Times.

The Largest Revenue to the States. And has by far the largest number when compared with 58 Companies reported officially by the Commissioners of New York and Massachusetts it will be seen that the Ætna ranks as one of the first Companies of the Continent. But two of the fifty-eight Companies permitted to do business in New York and Massachusetts had so large an income for the year 1868; but two had so large a number of Policies in force, but one among all those incorporated under the laws of the State of New York had so small a per centage of Expense to Income during the year 1868.

Its expenses are lower than most Companies', and consequently its ability to make and pay liberal dividends to the insured is greater than that of most other Companies. It is one of the great Companies of the land in Income, in Assets, in Number of Policies, in Amount Insured, in Solidity and Strength, in Soundness, Cheapness, Promptness, and Success.
