DOES IT PAY TO GROW RASPBERRIES?

To show whether it does pay to grow raspberries or not, I will give the yield from half an acre, growing the same from the plot containing originally 757 plants, of which number from thirty to sixty were killed out the first year by killing up. The soil was composed of yellow sand and a loamy heavy sand, with a clay bottom on part of the plot; the variety, Seneca Black Cap. There were picked for market over forty bushels of berries, which sold for over four dollars a bushel, besides several bushels of which no account was made. What were picked for market were grown where it was easily bottom.

On the clay bottom there were from twenty to thirty bushels of berries which were left unpicked from being so dry as to be worthless. There was not enough rain, but once, after they had blossomed, to reach half way down to the roots; but with the lack of moisture, had the plot been thoroughly cultivated, the loss of berries would have been small, but there was nothing done to them after they were killed up in the Spring.

No one need expect to grow good crops of berries without giving them proper care. In a favorable season, with proper cultivation, one hundred bushels of berries can be grown on the same plot where only a little over forty bushels were sold this year. If any one doubts that the above yield can be grown on half an acre, I would advise them to visit different growers and see the different crops, and I think they will have, then, all doubt removed. But such yields are not required to make it pay. Even fifty bushels per acre pays a great deal better than a crop of corn. But every one who has a rod of land should raise enough for home use.—Cor. Practical Farmer.

CARE OF HORSES.

The London "Horse Book" says: "All horses must not be fed in the same proportions, without regard to their ages, their constitutions and their work; because the propriety of such a practice is self-evident. Yet it is constantly done, and is the cause of disease of every kind."

Never use hay on account of its cheapness, because there is not proper nourishment in it. Damaged corn is exceedingly injurious, because it brings on inflammation of the bowels and skin diseases.

Chaff is better for old horses than hay, because they can chew and digest it better. Mix chaff with corn or beans, and do not give the latter alone, because it makes the horse chew his food more and digest it better.

Hay or grass alone will not support a horse under hard work, because there is not sufficient nutriment in either. When a horse is worked hard his food should chiefly be oats—if not worked hard his food should chiefly be hay—because oats supply more nourishment and flesh making material than any other kind of food; hay not so much.

For a saddle or coach horse, half a peck of ground oats and sixteen pounds of good hay are sufficient. If the hay is not good, add a quarter of a peck more oats. A horse which works harder may have rather more of each; one that works little should have less.

Rack feeding is wasteful. The better plan is to feed with chopped hay, from a manger, because the food is not then thrown about, and is more easily chewed and digested.

Sprinkle the hay with water that has salt dissolved in it, because it is pleasing to the animal's taste, and more easily digested. A teaspoonful of salt in a bucket of water is sufficient.

Oats should be bruised for an old horse but not for a young one, because the former through age and defective teeth, cannot chew them properly; the young horse can do so, and they are thus properly mixed with the saliva and turned into wholemore nutriment.

EARLY GARDENS.—Have a little corner in your garden where the plow never comes, to be sowed up and planted in corn as the ground will permit, and long before the regular garden making season begins. A little hot bed no larger than an ordinary window sash will cover, will make a great difference with your vegetables. Make a frame of boards the size of your sash, and stake it firmly to the ground. Throw out the soil earth to the depth of eighteen inches and fill nearly all with manure. Cover this with three inches of rich soil, and plant a row of cabbage, one of tomatoes, peppers, cauliflower and beans. Moisture with tepid water occasionally. The plants will be ready to remove to the main garden at an early date, and of course come to maturity much sooner than those early planted.—Rural American.

A ROW AND TRAGEDY AT BRITTON.—A row, which resulted in a tragedy, occurred at Britton on Saturday. We have the following particulars from an eye witness:—As the Tennessee bully named Jackson C. Booker with several of his friends, came to town, filled themselves with whiskey, and were behaving in a riotous and disorderly manner. The sheriff and town constable remonstrated with the party and requested them to be more orderly. The ruffian in turn abused the officers in an outrageous manner and defied them. The constable, Mr. J. C. Hamner, attempted to arrest one of the gang, a brother of Jack Booker. He called on his brother for assistance, who the latter came up with a pistol in each hand, and commenced firing on the constable, while the rest of the party pulled him with stones. After Booker had a spirit both of his pistols, Mr. Hamner's unassisted firing on him, and succeeded in placing two or three balls in him, which proved immediately fatal. Hamner was shot through the arm and breast, with several and others, but were aided in his crippled condition, in awaiting all the party engaged in the row.—Lynchburg V. Advertiser.
