LEFT HAND PLOWS.

Prejudices on this subject, like all others, are hard to remove; but if farmers would consider the question fairly, and what is better, if they will try both kinds of plows, they will find the left hand plow decidedly preferable. As a general rule, farming in Pennsylvania is thought to be better done than it is in Virginia; but in some parts of Virginia, particularly the counties of Clarke and Jefferson, ploughing is better done than it is generally in Pennsylvania; and one reason of this is the use of three-horse left hand plows. In those counties two horse plows are rarely seen, and right-hand plows are never seen. There are three reasons, not very potent, but sufficiently so to decide the question, why left-hand plows should be preferred. The first is, any horse which does not walk too fast makes a good leader, and all know, before the introduction of left-hand plows, the greatest recommendation to a work-horse was being a barefoot leader. Secondly, the plow cuts uniformly a given quantity of land; and thirdly, when back-furrowing, the horses turn, at the ends, to the left, which is better than turning to the right, because in this case the leader has to push the other horse round, which takes up time and injures the horses' feet materially by treading on each other—whereas, turning to the left, the leader pulls the other horses easily around, and they do not hurt each other's feet and ankles. The advantage of back furrowing is, the horses tramping the unploughed ground at the end of each furrow, which is not the case when the ploughing is done in lands. Then they walk out at the extremity of every furrow on the ploughed ground, which renders it unfit for the seed until it is ploughed again.

Now, if the left-hand plough costs more than the right-hand, or if there could be any reason assigned in favor of the right-hand plough which the left-hand does not possess, we would not take up our time urging the superiority of the left hand plough for the reasons we have given. Both kinds are alike, except in those particulars we have named; and they are sufficient to induce every farmer, when he is obliged to buy a plough, to choose a left-hand, whether it be for two or three horses.—Religious Herald.

CONDITION OF OUR BOTTOM LAND.

Whilst I have pen in hand, I will offer a few remarks relative to the present condition of our bottom lands.

When the streams were in their natural state, every freshet would impel the currents to strike the curves in the stream with such force that the washings or sand were flosted or thrown on the adjoining lands; consequently, the bed of the stream remained stationary. This fact every owner of bottom lands has noticed. But since the streams have been straightened, do they throw out the same amount of washings as when in their natural state? No, verily; but, on the contrary, they have continued to accumulate in the bed of the streams until the banks have become so shallow that they afford no protection to the bottom lands, consequently they are nearly valueless.

I have observed when a stream has been straightened near its source, that it is not so liable to fill up; but when it extends for miles, the reverse is the invariable result.

Some twenty-five years ago, an old and intelligent friend, who owned valuable bottom lands, directed my attention to the mistaken policy of straightening the creeks, and regretted having fallen into this error, as he found after his creek was made straight, the sands were accumulating in the channel, the banks were shallower, and his bottom lands more subject to be overflowed, (although the stream has been straightened in its whole length below him,) and he feared that from this cause his lands would ultimately be ruined; and how truly has the foreboding been verified; for at this day these lands are nearly worthless.—This stream in its natural state, had excellent banks.

If this theory is deemed erroneous, I would ask, why is it that the rivers are not filled up? Are they not governed by the same natural laws as the smaller streams in their primeval state?

Entertaining these views, I think we should go back to first principles, and give our ditches a serpentine curve to reclaim our bottom lands, which should be carried through the whole length of the stream.

It is with some degree of diffidence that I submit the above views to your consideration and that of your readers, lest they might be deemed a vagary; yet I have arrived at these conclusions from observation and the teachings of nature, which are the charts by which we are enabled to substitute philosophy for error.—Wm. R. Harcourt, in the Southern Planter and Farmer.

HUNGARIAN GRASS OR MILLET.—The Hungarian grass, or some variety of millet, may be profitably used to increase the supply of winter provender. It makes a rich and well relished fodder for horses and cattle, and yields a heavy burden on rich or well manured loam. The ground should be put in fine condition, and everything in readiness for sowing by the first of June. A peck of seed makes a sufficient sowing.

CURE FOR RINGBONE.—A correspondent of the Rural New Yorker says that he has known a horse that went for twelve months on three legs from ringbone, made perfectly sound by the application, once a day, of an ointment composed of half an ounce of red precipitate, half an ounce of blue stone, half a pint of turpentine, thoroughly mixed. Keep the hoof green.

In every 100 pounds cow's urine there are 66 pounds of water, 3 pounds of urea, 5 pounds of phosphate of lime, 12 pounds of sal ammoniac and muriate potash and ammonia. Urine is more efficient on light soils, due to clay and strong loams; as the latter much of its carbonate of ammonia is retained before it can penetrate into them.

CURE MACHINE.—A subscriber says he has a quantity of chip manure on a small lot and would like to know if it is good as a top dressing for wet land. [Not very.] Is it valuable for composting with cotton seed? [Yes.] Is it good for dry land, ploughed or harrowed in? [Yes, both]. In short, well-rotted chip manure is very good for almost any soil and for all crops, if there are not too many wire worms in it. To kill these, compost it or mix well with lime and salt, or lime slaked with urine.—American Agriculturalist.

The Largest Revenue to the States. And has by far the largest number when compared with 58 Companies reported officially by the Commissioners of New York and Massachusetts it will be seen that the Ætna ranks as one of the first Companies of the Continent. But two of the fifty-eight Companies permitted to do business in New York and Massachusetts had so large an income for the year 1868; but two had so large a number of Policies in force, but one among all those incorporated under the laws of the State of New York had so small a per centage of Expense to Income during the year 1868.

Its expenses are lower than most Companies', and consequently its ability to make and pay liberal dividends to the insured is greater than that of most other Companies. It is one of the great Companies of the land in Income, in Assets, in Number of Policies, in Amount Insured, in Solidity and Strength, in Soundness, Cheapness, Promptness, and Success. Persons contemplating this mode of investment in the future as in the past would do well to examine the claims of all and take a policy accordingly.
