SPECIAL TAX BONDS OF THE STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Letter from the Hon. T. L. Clingman, ex United States Senator.

ST. NICHOLAS HOTEL, Oct. 6, 1869.

Messrs. Henry Clews & Co.

GENTLEMEN:—In reply to your inquiries about North Carolina and her bonds, I can make only a brief statement, as I leave the city this evening. Publications have been made in several of the newspapers recently calculated to create a prejudice against the new or special tax bonds. Whether they have originated in the jealousy of the old bondholders, or may have been inspired by a desire to depress these bonds in the market, in order that they may be brought up at low rates for the benefit of speculators, it is not material to determine. These special tax bonds stand on a footing similar to that of preferred stock in certain corporations, and of mortgage bonds issued by railroad companies. It was not a matter of choice with the legislature of our State as to whether these bonds should have a special tax imposed to insure their payment. In fact, the legislature did issue some bonds without this tax feature, but the Supreme Court pronounced them unconstitutional and void. Under the decisions of our court, the legislature cannot increase the debt of the State for intended improvements, except to complete unfinished works in which the State had an interest at the time when the new Constitution was adopted. And even in these cases a special tax must be imposed in the act making the appropriation to pay off the interest as it becomes due. I need not remind you that this new Constitution was adopted in compliance with the requisitions of the government of the United States. It may, with propriety, be added that, while some of the provisions of the new Constitution are distasteful to many of our citizens, this clause seems to be universally approved. The legislature cannot add to the debt for new objects without the sanction of the majority of the people of the whole State, and it is well understood that in the present condition of things no such vote can be obtained.

The matter then stands on this footing: The Constitution of the State compelled the legislature to impose this tax, and the obligation was complied with and the tax imposed on all the property of the State.—The several acts were accepted by the companies, and they are not repealable or subject to alteration by a subsequent legislature. The Constitution, too, by one of its provisions, requires that the money raised by this special tax shall be applied only to meet the interest on the bonds. Hence these bonds would seem to rest legally on as firm and solid ground as a private debt secured by a mortgage. The obligation could only be gotten rid of by revolutionary action, which I do not think is contemplated by any one at the present time.

The taxes imposed in these acts are sufficient, when collected, to discharge the interest as it becomes due. In fact the Governor informed me recently, that at the rate at which the returns were coming in from the counties, there would be in the Treasury more money than was necessary to meet the interest. The present assessed valuation of the property in the State does not exceed $250,000,000, but the real value is at least fifty per cent. greater, or not below $375,000,000. I have been in many parts of the State within the last four years, and have been gratified to see that there has been a steady and by no means a slow increase in its wealth. The value of the personal property is twice what it was at the close of the war, while real estate has advanced in value from thirty to fifty per cent. This has occurred without the aid, to any considerable extent, of capital or immigration from abroad. It is due simply to the fact that our people work more and spend less than they did formerly.—As things are progressing, in a few years the value of our property will be quite equal to what it was in 1860; and as the special taxes are in the form of a certain per centage of the value, the amount raised will increase in proportion to the whole value of the property of the State. The excess above what is necessary to pay the original interest will constitute a sinking fund for the discharge of the principal of the debt. The Special Tax Debt amounts to the highest estimate to $16,240,000.—Rejecting the bonds, against the validity of which the Supreme Court has decided, the remaining debt swells the aggregate of the State's obligations of all kinds, whether immediate or contingent, to $34,290,945.

The payment of this debt depends on two things, namely: the ability of the State to pay, and her willingness to do so. As to her ability it may be assumed that her present property is of more than ten times the value of her liabilities. No one will deny that a man who is the owner of property of the value of one thousand dollars could pay a debt of one hundred dollars only. It must not be forgotten, too, that most of this debt is not payable short of a period of twenty and even thirty years.

Nearly half of it is only to be paid after the lapse of the longer period, and by that time the wealth of the State will most probably be five fold or ten fold what it now is. The expenditure to be made, as the result of these obligations, is almost entirely for works of internal improvement, which will largely add to the ability of the State to pay. There is not one of these unfinished works for which the late appropriations were made that is not in itself a proper and necessary undertaking, and as such was begun long since.

It should also be remembered that the State owns on connection with these and other works, stocks, bonds and mortgages, which in the aggregate amount to the sum of $10,481,000, and are certainly nearly equal to her liabilities. The completion of the works will enable her to realize a large sum from these sources. I know that last winter responsible parties offered to pay the State $3,000,000, in her outstanding bonds for her stock in the North Carolina or Central Railroad. In other words, she could have gotten back all she had ever invested in that road, and had the satisfaction of knowing that she had, without any loss to herself, completed a work which had added so largely to her wealth and general prosperity. When the works now in progress are completed, they will, by the increase of taxable wealth, and also by the value of the stocks and other securities given in the discharge of the obligations, greatly add to the ability of the State to pay. For example, when the Western North Carolina Railroad is finished, for the completion of which the means voted are, in my opinion, sufficient, it will, by its connections with Tennessee and Georgia, afford the shortest line between the South west and the ports of North Carolina and Virginia. The large amount of travel along it, and the cotton and other freight which would go to Norfolk or our own ports, would greatly enhance the value of several of the roads in the central and eastern parts of the State.

It may be well to remind you that North Carolina is larger in territory than either New York or Pennsylvania, having an area of more than fifty thousand square miles. The late professor Ellicott, who made the agricultural surveys both of New York and North Carolina, in an official report stated that a certain county in the latter State, if it were drained and cultivated in the best manner, was capable of producing more corn than at that time was grown in the whole State of New York. Should this be regarded as extravagant, it will nevertheless be conceded by those who have given attention to the subject, that the natural advantage of North Carolina, for agricultural and other branches of industry, surpass those of either of these great states. The financial condition of Pennsylvania and Maryland was thirty years ago little better than that of North Carolina is now, after the disasters of the late civil war, and yet no States in the Union are in advance of them in solvency and public confidence.

When I do attempt to enumerate the advantages which North Carolina possesses in her good climate, her mines and minerals, water power and agricultural productions, and her capacity to give support and wealth to a large population, I should be compelled to extend this letter to great length. I content myself with saying, therefore, that there is not the slightest doubt that she is abundantly able to discharge all her obligations. On the second point, viz: her willingness to do so, I have little to say.

It will be seen from the above statement that the special tax debt is on such a footing that its payment does not depend upon the action of any future Legislature, and that it can only be gotten rid of by a revolutionary movement which would overthrow the present State Constitution. Since the result of the last Presidential contest, I do not believe any such calculation exists in the State. Those who are dissatisfied with certain features in the new Constitution expect only to change them in the mode in which State Constitutions are usually amended. No alterations so made will affect the validity of the bonds, the payment of which is secured by these special taxes. The old bonds of the State have not this advantage, and may not be as promptly provided for.

The people of the State generally are satisfied that it would in the end cost more money to repudiate a debt than to pay it. The suggestions of certain papers in North Carolina, republished occasionally in this city, that the whole or portions of the debt ought to be repudiated, have certainly injured the State considerably by depressing the price of the bonds and causing a loss of money, in the first place to the railroad companies, and secondly to the State.

But for this undoubtedly more money would have been raised by the sale of the securities, and the ability of the corporations to finish the works would have been greater. This effect, however, will be but temporary, as, when the facts are understood, the credit of the State will revive.—In conclusion, I have to say that I regard the special tax bonds of the State especially as a safe investment for such person as are seeking that class of securities. The attacks now directed against them, whether made for political effect or to put down the price so that parties here can buy them up at low figures, and, thereby make large profits, will not in the end seriously affect their value.

As I shall leave the city to-day, you will excuse my saying that I have no personal interest in these questions, neither owning any bonds, nor having since the war been engaged, either directly or indirectly, in selling them.

Respectfully yours, &c.,
T. L. CLINGMAN.

"Your Washing Machine has been in daily use in our laundry and the housekeeper expresses herself as highly pleased with it. It certainly accomplishes a greater account of work, with less labor, and does not wear the clothes near so much as the old fashioned wash-board. By using it one laundress is dispensed with."—*Wm. M.
