JOSIAH TURNER, Jr., EDITOR.

MOHAMMED.

Mohammed was a little above the medium stature, strongly but sparely built, with broad shoulders and a slight stoop, his hair was black, and in his prime clustered over his ears, his beard and mustache of the same color, the latter luxuriant, reaching half way down his chest, his forehead large with a prominent vein, which swelled when angry, his complexion fair, eyes large, black, piercing, blood-shot, and restless, his teeth, white and well formed, stood apart, his walk so rapid that others needed to run to keep pace with him, and his gate like that of a man striding down hill.

He was simple in all his appatel, never wore silk but once, and then threw it aside in disgust, saying it was no fit dress for a man. His common attire was cotton, striped with white and red. Like all Arabs, he had no taste for comfort. A low hut of burnt tiling, with a palm-tree roof, would have been preferred to a palace.

Still, he was in some things of extremely delicate and sensitive taste, as in the use of perfumes, and distaste for unpleasant odors.

At Medina he once sent back a dish of mutton flavored with onions, saying it was not agreeable to his angel. He never travelled without toothpicks, and autimony for his eyes. He listened well in conversation, and in shaking hands was never the first to withdraw his own.

He was not, like the Arabs in general, passionately fond of sports and games, and in all things must not like the heroic ideal of Arabic character.

He was born at the city of Mecca, A. D. 571 from which place he fled to Medina July 16, 622. This flight gave rise to the epoch in chronology called the Hegira, which in Arabic denotes to flee or quit one's country or friends.

The creed of Mohammed was planned in a cave near Mecca. A Persian Jew, well versed in history and the laws, and two Christians, were his assistants. One of the latter was of the Jacobite, and the other of the Nestorian sect. With this help he framed the Koran, which he pretended to receive from the angel Gabriel, written in the Koraish Arabic which he declared was the language of Paradise. In this language the Koran 1,000 terms for and 1,000 terms for serpent and not a single honey. He supposed to be written about the year 650 and the people was to make Jews and Christians with the different professions of idolatry, in the worship of one God, under certain laws and ceremonies, exacting obedience to Mahomet as Prophet. The style of the volume is fluent, concise, and beautiful, and where the attributes of God are described, it is sublime and magnificent. It admits the divine mission of both Moses and Christ. The leading article of faith is comprended of an eternal truth and a decree and Mahomet is his apostle. He died in 631, of the effects of a slow poison, given to him by a Jew, three years before, in order to discover whether he was a true prophet, and immortal as he declared himself to be. Millions have believed since that day, from every quarter of the globe.

A HEATHEN RITE WITH A CHRISTIAN MORAL.

In a certain festival of the Aztecs, which Prescott, a human sacrifice was offered. A year before the intended sacrifice, a captive distinguished for his personal beauty and vigor was chosen his body, was selected to represent the deity. He was raised to a splendid throne and regaled with meats and a profusion of beautiful flowers. When he was attended by a retinue of noble pages and he indulged in the streets to pay some favorite models, the crowd prostrated themselves before him and did him homage. In this way, he led an easy, idle life, for a month, a month of his servitude. Four beautiful girls were then selected as companions, and with them he continued to revel in idle dalliance, and was treated at the banquets of the prime parasites.

At length the fatal day of sacrifice arrived. He was stripped of his gaudy apparel, and led a slave to the foot pavement of his mysteries. A gay barge transported him across the lake to a temple within a short margin. As the procession wound up the sides of the pyramid on which the temple was built, the unhappy victim broke away in gay capers, and flowers were strewed in his path. Arrived at the summit, he was met with a salutation of music, and a dance commenced, in which the priests and priestesses of the temple joined. Then he was stretched upon the sacrificial stone. Five priests secured his head and limbs, while a sixth, at a signal, cut out the palpitating heart.

Now we draw the moral. It must be said with the deepest and most earnest solemnity, persuasive, luscious, but, we must, we do pain, we die, [illegible]

THE CREEDS BOOK. The feels have commenced, and their blight of realism is now apparent. Men will speak what is in and honestly. As only people are only can they know how many of those that have professed to be Christians are [illegible] Judas's kiss [illegible] to betray [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] to
