MRS. WESLEY'S DISCIPLINE FOR CHILDREN.

The mother of John Wesley, the great Reformer, was a most remarkable woman, and it was evidently from her, and not from his father, that Wesley inherited and acquired that deep piety and earnestness in the service of God, which made him the greatest preacher of his day. In a letter to a friend detailing her views of the management of her children, Mrs. Wesley gives the following as her rules for the discipline of the mind:

"In order" says Mrs. Wesley, "to form the minds of children, the first thing to be done is to conquer their will and bring them to an obedient temper. To inform the understanding is a work of time, and must, with children, proceed by slow degrees, as they are able to bear it; but the subjecting the will is a thing which must be done at once and the sooner the better. When the will of a child is totally subdued, and it is brought to revere and stand in awe of its parents, then a great many childish follies and indiscretions may be passed by. Some should be overlooked and taken no notice of, and others mildly corrected, but no wilful transgression ought ever to be forgiven children without chastisement, more or less, as the nature and circumstances of the case require. * * * They were quickly made to understand they might have nothing they cried for, and resolved to speak one word only for what they wanted. * * * not were they ever permitted to cry each other by their proper name without the addition of brother or sister. None of them were taught to read till five years old, except Kezz, on whose case I was over fruitful, and she was more years learning than any five children in three months. The way of teaching was this. The day before a child began to learn, the house was set in order, every one's work appointed them, and a charge given that none should come into the room from nine to twelve, or from two to five, which you know were our school hours. One day was allowed the child wherein to learn his letters, and each of them out in that I made it a rule to let no one, great and small, except Molly and Nancy, who were always employed, forget they knew them perfectly. I remember I longed to know my letter day, and so I believe did most of the children; for having then the alphabet by heart, they were put to spell and read the first chapter in the Bible they could find. * * *
