BRIDE AND BRIDEGROOM—How THEY DRESSED A CHURCHY AGo.—To begin with the lady: Her looks were strained upwards on an immense cushion, that just like an incubus on her head, and plastered over with pomatum, and then sprinkled over with a shower of white powder. The height of this tower was somewhat over a foot. The single white ruffled bow on her top, like an eagle on a hyacinth. Her hair and beads was folded a lace handkerchief, fastened in front by a lacy pin rather larger than a copper cent, containing her grandmother's miniature, set in virgin gold.

THE WIFE AND HER CHILD ALL NIGHT IN THE SNOW.—In the great snow storm of the 15th of February last Mrs. Nathaniel Moody's little son, with a horse and buggy, was out in the snow. The mother's side of Taylor Pond. She had in her arms a child two years of age. On reaching the pond she attempted to drive across to shorten the distance, but lost the track, and after driving around in a circle for an hour or more, she being dark and cold, she decided to go where she was and make the best of the situation. Wrapping the child up in two bundles of robes, which she fortunately had, she unshipped the horse and turned him loose. She then tipped the pony up and made a temporary shelter beneath it, and wrapping the drapery of her coach about her, she made a pillow of her arm for the little child and with one robe beneath them sat on above them, and the child, snow and cold and under a heavy blanket, in a long, cold and desolate winter night. The snow drifted against the pony, and rendered her novel resting place warmer. Though her sleep was untroubled with dreams, Mrs. Moody wrote the next morning to find herself and the babe sleeping as sweetly on the snowy snow as on down pillows.

How to Court in Church.—A young gentleman, happening to sit at church in a row adjoining one in which a young lady for whom he conceived a sudden and violent attachment, was desirous of entering into a courtship on the spot, but the place not being suitable for a formal declaration, the case suggested the following plan.
