WHITEFIELD'S DEATH.

The time came for Whitefield to die. The man had been immortal till his work was done. His path had been bright, and it grew brighter to the end, like that of the just.

"You had better be in bed, Mr. Whitefield," said his host, the day he preached his last sermon.

"True," said the dying evangelist, and clasping his hands, cried: "I am weary in, not of, thy work, Lord Jesus."

He preached his last sermon at Newburyport. Pale and dying, he uttered therein one of the most pathetic sentences which ever came to his lips:

"I go to my everlasting rest. My sun has risen, shone, and is setting—nay, it is about to rise and shine forever. I have not lived in vain. And though I could live to preach Christ a thousand years, I die to be with him which is far better."

The shaft was levelled. That day he said: "I am dying!" He ran to the window; lavender drops were offered, but all help was vain; his work was done. The doctor said: "He is a dead man." And so he was; and died in silence. Christ required no dying testimony from one whose life had been a constant testimony.

Thus passed away on September 30th, 1770, one of the greatest spirits that ever inhabited a human tabernacle. The world has ever been an innumerable gainer by his life. He had preached eighty thousand sermons, and they had but two key-notes: 1. Man is guilty, he must be pardoned. 2. Man is immortal, he must be happy or wretched forever. Weeping filled Newburyport, flags floated at half-mast, and the ships fired minute-guns.

"Mortals cried, a man is dead;
Angels sang, a child is born."

Rev. Daniel Rodgers remembering in his prayer that Whitefield had been his spiritual father, burst into tears, and cried: "My father! my father! the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof."

THE HEART OF THE HOME.

All really useful and happy homes have a heart centre toward which every member gravitates, drawn by attractions resistless because untelt. The house-hand that surrounds, strengthens, and protects, is usually the husband and father. The house-heart is usually the wife and mother. More than several times have we known the weak, the sick, the needy one of the family to become the house-heart, to and from which the activities of every member were in steady circulation. For her room the best in the house was chosen. The stately parlor gave up its best chair and picture. To that room came the first flower, the first berries, the first fruit of orchard and vineyard. The newspaper came into that room first of all. There the father "reported" when returning, and left his good-bye when going.—Thither the young girl, dressed for a party came in to be admired in the household heart. Thither the sons have come thrice a day fresh with the last excitement, and stories from the street. For her, the concert the lecture, and the sermon have been listened to, and a story of them brought home. Her need has wrought a gentleness and unity though the whole family. Her tranquil judgment has tempered hasty speeches and taught the way of impartial thought,—Around her chair, or couch, or bed, as around an altar thrice consecrated, have come daily worshippers, with Scripture, song and prayer. And so though years of chastened enjoyment and trembling hope, this family has found training in a life of unity, purity, and love. The house has had a heart. The passers-by said "afflicted."—But the dwellers knew that the affliction was working out fruits most peaceable and rewards eternal.

The heart ceased to beat. The room was empty. The errands and the services of love ended. And the stricken ones stood together, and with voices low and earnest, vowed and prayed: By the memory of the past, by the sobs and emptiness of this hour and by the hope of the future, we vow a holy living in the Lord; and we beseech him that in his house of many homes, we may have one, and may she be the heart of it. Amen. BLESSED ARE THEY THAT MOURN.

MARRIED LIFE.—Good counsel from a wife and mother: "I will try to make myself and all around me agreeable. It will not do to leave a man to himself till he comes to you, to take no pains to attract him, or to appear before him with a long face. It is not so difficult as you think, dear child, to behave to a husband so that he shall remain forever a husband. I am an old woman, but you can still do what you like; a word from you at the right time will not fail of its effect; what need have you to play the suffering virture? The tear of a loving girl, says an old book, is like a dew drop on a rose; but that on the cheek of a wife is a drop of pain to her husband. Try to appear cheerful and contented, and your husband will be so; and when you have made him happy, you will become so, in reality. Nothing flatters a man so much as the happiness of his wife, he is always proud of himself as being the source of it. As soon as you are cheerful you will be lively and alert, and every moment will afford you an opportunity to let fall an agreeable word. Your education which gives you an immense advantage, will greatly assist you; and your sensibility will become the noblest gift that nature has bestowed on you, when it shows itself in affectionate assiduity, and stamps on every action's soft, kind, tender character, instead of wasting itself in secret repinings."

THE RESTORATION OF SEBASTOPOL.—The walls of Sebastopol are completely restored, and upward of three hundred houses have been built in place of those ruined by the bombardment. A new church, in the form of a pyramid, built entirely of marble, has also been erected in the churchyard of the town. The funds for the construction of this building were raised by a public subscription in the whole of Russia. The chief of the subscribers was Princess Wassilichykoff, who gave up for that purpose the whole of her year's pension, amounting to 15,000 rubles (£2,000). A sum of 200,000 rubles was expended on the building. The principal monument in the churchyard is that of Prince Michael Gortschakoff. On it is the following inscription: "Here lie among warriors the mortal remains of the man who prevented the enemies of our country from penetrating to this spot." The tombstones of the men are all alike in shape and size, and each of them bears the inscription: "Grave of our brother."

Notice! Notice! Notice! Notice!

HAVING seen by the Standard and Sentinel of 5th, that the Yarborough House is advertised as the only first class Hotel, we wish to call the attention of the travelling public to two or three facts:

It is well known that the National Hotel is new and was furnished by J. R. Blair, (who gave an this notice extraordinary of the Yarborough House,) regardless of expense, only this past Fall, but it was done when he was said to be the Proprietor, and notwithstanding he has expressed it, by his first class boarders, and such, who attend calls to the Yarborough. The trouble was he had to go there himself.

To do justice to the owners of this property, my interests are opposed. I will say there are the public simply give the house a trial, and they will say no where. Patent Axles and Springs are to be found in the South at Baltimore.

The above Fluid has been in constant use for upwards of three years, and has sustained its unrivaled reputation, as a brilliant, non-explosive illuminating agent, though subjected to the severest tests. Being universally commended to be superior to Kerosene or Coal Oil. It makes a better light and more of it, than any other illuminating compound. Soft, clear, steady and unbalanced to the eyes. All that is asked is, a fair and impartial trial.

Among the numerous testimonials received read the following:

PHILADELPHIA, March 15th, 1869.

This is to certify, that I have witnessed the experiments of Messrs. Hale & Co., with their Combination Burning Fluid, take pleasure in commending it to the public. The various tests to which the Fluid was subjected, was in the highest degree satisfactory. We have no hesitation in pronouncing it to be a safe and brilliant illuminating agent. The cheapness added to its other good qualities, should insure its introduction into every family in the country, where Kerosene Oil is used.
