

THE SENTINEL

Who pay them just for their labor? Who help them when they are old? Who show us a home, a refuge when we are most forsaken? Who protect us when our duty and honor are at stake? Who show us the way to heaven, the God-sent mercies and blessings?

AD. AND "GOING FOR BLOOD." We admit to our columns to day a communication from "Madison" who makes the suggestion that the Governor may be mad, or more properly speaking, crazy. We have been the recipient of it, and it was made by the same person.

Madison was not waiting, even within the recollection of those now living, of men continuing to perform official functions in a State where the Governor was going to be deposed long before the end of the year.

Madison was certainly crazy when he called for the link to write a check, at the same time declaring that he "went for blood." About this time Randolph declared he would not go to England until he could see from a Southern port, "I will not," said he, "give my money to those who are ready to make my negroes cut my throat."

The excitement incidental to the settlement of the Missouri question, which well nigh rent the Union asunder, was said to be the immediate cause of Randolph's insanity. Excessive watching and anxiety on that perplexing question, set the mysterious wrought machinery of his mind to whirling and dashing in mad disorder.
