JOSIAH TURNER, Jr., EDITOR.

THE SEA ILLUMINATED.

A correspondent of the Chicago Oneida writing from "the Gulf Stream, about the following account of a remarkable illumination of the sea, at which Admiral Farragut was present:

The air was quite still; as the wind had for four hours before veered slowly from the south to northeast, in consequence, no doubt, of a storm which passed by on the horizon. It still lightened very vividly on the western horizon; the heaven was covered with light clouds, through which the moon shone with some brilliancy. We made the sail fast as the engines was to be set in motion. I leaned over the stern, and looked into the water. Beneath me was a reflection of the moon. There appeared to be about a fathom or more of water, and the shape, like an object seen in a great depth of water. The surface of the sea was gently heaving up and down, while the white patches swam not far from the ship, without perceptibly brightening that part of the marine mirror which lay in the light of the moon. We then steamed forward at the rate of six or seven knots an hour, and a wonderful spectacle now presented itself. Athwart the vessel long white waves of light were seen rushing towards it, ever brighter, and in swifter motion, till they seemed to flow together, and at length nothing could be seen on the water but a whirling white light. Looking steadfastly at it, the water, the air, and the horizon seemed blended in one; thick streamers of mist seemed to float by both sides of the ship with frantic speed. The appearance of color resembled those which arise when one turns a black and white striped ball so quickly that the white stripes seem to run together. The spectacle lasted about five minutes, and was repeated once again for two minutes. No doubt it was caused by shoals of minute animalcules in the water, and these waves originated in the white flakes first described. The usual luminous appearance of the sea which shows itself when the water ripples in the wake of a ship, or the waves break against the rudder, is not to be compared with this. The light is then brilliant, light green, or blue, like phosphorus, often most beautiful in deep clear water, mixed with reddish white foam; we saw a very pretty specimen of this sort one night in perfectly smooth water in a little lonely bay. It was pitch dark, and quite still, when there fell a heavy shower of rain, consisting of large drops not falling very close together. Every drop that fell into the water lighted up, flaming drops sprang into the air, and a small luminous circle was formed where the rain drop met the sea. The whole bay seemed covered with fiery stars, but a rising current of air soon destroyed the picture.

A PRACTICAL VIEW OF THE WAR.

[From the Times of the 2d Inst., July 28.]

Let us not speak lightly of war, and especially of modern war. Tried soldiers look grave when they speak of this shock of dense masses to be led in a few days to a field of carnage, there to make trial of the engines of destruction with which the two belligerent powers are amply provided. The dead will be reckoned by hundreds of thousands, and the next day there will be mourning in a million of families. The antique courage of those cavaliers, mailed in iron, whose lightest exploits were pompously celebrated, seems to pale before the resignation of the modern soldier, exposed uncovered to the fire of chassepot and mitrailleuse.

There is talk of experiments made within these few days, in the environs of Paris, with cannon of a new model, breech-loading and firing forty balls at each discharge. It is the pistol revolver system applied to artillery, with this great difference, that the projectiles do not follow the one line of fire but from a semi-circle. These guns are divided in four sections, each portable by one man. They are put together and screwed up tight in three or four minutes. The Prussians also have, it seems, their revolving gun and their field mitrailleuse. We read that these weapons have been tested and constructed with the greatest secrecy. The place of manufacture was surrounded by a cordon of troops, under the most precise orders to repel all curious inquiry.

A GOOD PLATFORM.—The Executive Committee of the Democratic party of Louisiana have issued an address, setting forth the grounds of their opposition to Radicalism in the approaching election. They are applicable to all the reconstructed States, and are thus sketched in brief by an exchange:

They declare the pernicious consequences of the acts of the Radical party throughout the State have been severely felt by all classes, white and colored, native and foreign born, and that all have been plundered, deceived, oppressed, and restricted in the enjoyment of rights guaranteed by every law, human and divine. At the same time the platform of the Democratic party is announced to be retrenchment and reform; to rid the State of its enormous debt; reduce taxation; have the levees rebuilt; restore confidence and promote harmony between capital and labor; between the colored man and the planter; between the latter and the merchant; to induce immigration, and to develop the vast agricultural wealth of the State. For the accomplishment of these objects, the Democratic party asks the cooperation of all the honest men of the State. And they will receive it, and thus secure a substantial victory at the polls.

A POND OF DEATH.—It is said the waters of Flax Pond, in Lynn, appear to be so thoroughly impregnated with some poisonous matter as to destroy nearly if not quite all living things in them. Along the beach on Maple street, a few days ago, the dead fresh water clams (thousand of their shells by the process of decomposition) had been washed up in such numbers that bushels of them might have been gathered. Large numbers of dead fish and eels were also to be seen along the borders of the pond, and several hens, who have forbid their attendance here from infancy, with ancient emptiness of the skin and cravings of the gizzard. It is thought by some of the residents in that section that the contamination is attributable to some plants on the neighboring estate thereof, located at the northern end of the pond.—Herald.
