CHINESE RELIGION.

Dr. T. J. Allen, recently returned from the U. S. Consulate at Shanghai, in a lecture delivered before the Young Men's Christian Association in Cincinnati, gave some interesting facts in reference to the religion and worship of the Chinese. We copy the following from the reports given of his interesting discourse:

CHINESE IDEA OF SUPREME BEING.

How great is the Supreme Tao!
Not made, yet existing; the end and the beginning of creatures and multibilations.
Before the earth and before the heavens were,
Light and glory unite around Him,
Continuing for eternal creations and multibilations.
In the East He taught our father Confucius.
In the West He directed the immortal Kinsien.
All 100 kings have kept his laws;
Holy, perfect men have received His instructions.
The first of all religions;
Marvelous is it—passing marvelous!

"SACRED EDICTS"—MORAL LAW OF CHINA.

1. Pay just regard to filial and fraternal duties, in order to give due importance to the relations of life.
2. Respect kindred, in order to display the excellence of harmony.
3. Let concord abound among those who dwell in the same neighborhood, in order to prevent litigation.
4. Give the chief place to husbandry and the culture of the mulberry leaf, in order to procure adequate supplies of food and raiment.
5. Hold economy in estimation, in order to prevent lavish extravagance.
6. Magnify academical learning, in order to direct and encourage the scholar's progress.
7. Degrade strange religions, in order to exalt the orthodox doctrines.
8. Explain the laws, in order that the ignorant and obstinate may be warned.
9. Illustrate the principles of a polite and yielding demeanor, in order to improve public manners.
10. Attend to the essential (standard) employments, in order to give unvarying direction to the minds of the people.
11. Instruct the youth, in order to prevent them from doing evil.
12. Suppress all false accusing, in order to secure protection to the innocent.
13. Warn those who hide deserters from public duty, in order that they may not be involved in their downfall.
14. Complete the payment of taxes, in order to avoid frequent dunning.
15. Unite the pao and the kea, in order to extirpate robbery and theft.
16. Settle private animosities, in order that live may be duly regarded.

"The 15th edict has relation to the method of suppressing robbery and theft, by sub-dividing districts into pao and kea—ten families forming one kea, and ten kea one pao, for police purposes in towns. At ends of streets gates are placed, with bells attached and lamps suspended, and after nine o'clock at night no one is allowed to pass without a permit from the officers of the pao and kea.

IMPERIAL PRAYER FOR RAIN.

Prostrated I beg imperial Heaven (Hoang tien) to pardon my ignorance and stupidity, and to grant me self-renovation, for myriads of innocent people are involved by me, a single man. My sins are so numerous it is difficult to escape from them. Summer is past and autumn is come, and no rain; to wait longer will really be impossible. Knocking head, I pray, imperial Heaven, to hasten with gracious deliverance a speedy and divinely beneficial rain; to save the people's lives, and in some degree redeem my iniquities. Oh, alas! imperial heaven, observe these things. Oh, alas! imperial heaven, be gracious to them. I am inexpressibly grieved and alarmed. Reverently this memorial is presented.

PRAYER AT ANCESTRAL TOMB.

TAOU-KWANG, 12 year, 3d moon, 1 day.

I, Lin Kwang, the 2d son of the 3d generation, presume to come before the tomb of my ancestor Lin Kung. The rolling year has brought again the season of spring. Cherishing sentiments of veneration, I look up and sweep your tomb. Prostrate, I pray that you will come and be present; and that you may grant to your posterity that they may be prosperous and illustrious; at this season of genial showers and gentle breezes I desire to recompense the root of my existence. Always grant me your safe protection. My trust is in your divine spirit. Reverently I present the 3 fold sacrifice (of a pig, a chicken, a duck, a goose and a fish,) also the offering of the 5 plates of fruits, with oblation of liquors, earnestly entreating that you will come and partake of them.

With most attentive respect this annunciation is presented to you on high.

[From the Moniteur de Calvados.]

A MOTHER'S CURSE UPON KING WILLIAM.

We call the attention of our readers to the following admirable letter. It is a cry from the heart and conscience of a mother of a family on the other side of the Rhine, sympathizing with the sorrows of French mothers, and agreeing with them in prophesying the terrible vengeance which both heaven and earth will soon render to King William and his satellites. Let us first of all cite the obliging correspondent who sends us this letter:

MR. EDITOR:—Being the inhabitant of a village in the environs of Paris, I have for the last six weeks lodged and boarded ten Prussians every day. The affair at Orleans happily freed me of my guests, and I took the opportunity to go and rejoin my family in Normandy. Before closing my doors I thought to put my house in order, and during that process I found the enclosed letter behind a piece of furniture. It was in German, and addressed to one of my lodgers. A Protestant minister, a friend of mine, was kind enough to translate it into French. If you think, sir, that this letter will interest your readers, it is very much at your service.

Accept, &c. DUBOIS, Contractor.

Here is the enclosure:

ROLANDSECK ON RHINE.

MY BEST BELOVED FREDERICK: It is a long time since I have received any news from you. On all sides I see mothers bewailing their children, wives lamenting their husbands, and I ask myself daily if I may not have to join my tears to theirs. If you are still of this world, my dearest, hasten to write and reassure me. I can do nothing but think of keeping for you one dear little children, who every morning ask for their father. Our eldest already, following the example of his elder comrades, begins to [illegible] of the King, and I dare not stay him.

What has France done to King William? What have we ourselves done to him that he should make us all so unhappy? This villainous man has no bowels of compassion! He forgets that there is a God. And the Queen does not love the King if she does not try to turn him from the atrocities which he is daily committing; she who knows all the misery that this war entails. Every day her palace is assailed by women clothed in black, old men and orphans who come to beg for peace and for bread. Thank God, up till now, my children and myself have not suffered want, but at what sacrifice? I have sold all my jewels. I only keep two things that are most dear to me: the cross that my dear mother gave me dying, and my wedding ring. When these precious relics shall have to go too, what will happen? But if you return soon I will forget all, and I believe I should still have the generosity to pardon the King all the evil he has done us. A quantity of clothing taken from the French arrive here constantly. I do not know if all this is right, war is not a thing that ought to be pillage and robbery. I do not doubt but that you entertain the same sentiments, my dear husband, and pray do not give yourself up to these villainies. What I am saying to you your venerable father, who also went into France in 1814, would also have said had we the pleasure still to possess him.

For a long time we have been without news of your brother in law; his wife is in the greatest grief; her resources diminish daily, and the health of her daughter never very good, gives me new causes of inquietude. If he does not soon return, will he see his daughter ever again?

Adieu, my dearest. Embrace your dear little children and you their tenderest caresses, and I embrace you without ceasing myself, ever yours. LOUISE.
