VOL. VI. RALEIGH, N. C., WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 18, 1871. NO. 122.

Daily Sentinel.

JOSIAH TURNER, JR., EDITOR.

THE SONGS OF THE SEA.—If the earth hath its songs of warbling birds, and rustling leaves, and wild spring winds and murmuring brooks, and, sweeter than all, voices of the heart, the sea, also, hath its songs of whistling winds, and rippling waves, and roaring billows. You are awakened in the morning by the sound of the surges; you are lulled to sleep in the evening by the hymn of the billows; and in the dead of the night you start up from your dream, feeling sure that you have heard the dear sweet voice of the loved ones far away, but it is only the song of the mermaids returning to their coral homes. The waves have their wild laugh when they play with the spirits of the deep and surely there is the thunder of the billows when old ocean wrestles with the tempest. But, whether it be in the "still small voice" of gentle wavelets, or in the louder singing of the large waves, or in the mighty thunder of the mountain billows the ocean "rests not, day nor night, for crying," with its thousand voices, "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts."

In 1768, when the approaching transit of Venus was exciting the interest and preparation of astronomers, the American Philosophical Society, of Philadelphia, petitioned the Legislature of the Province to procure a suitable telescope with which to observe the phenomenon, there being none in America. A hundred pounds were immediately appropriated, and Dr. Franklin, then in London, authorized to select and forward the instrument. David Rittenhouse, the earliest and one of the most distinguished astronomers of the country, with this instrument made this observation of the Transit of Venus 8th June, 1769, which, in consequence of the clouds that happened to obscure the sun at the interesting moment, at points of observation in other countries, constitute to this day the most valuable record of that transit. The old telescope, after a somewhat irregular history, is now comfortably at rest in the Pennsylvania State Library at Harrisburg.

During a recent excavation for a railroad in Sussex county, New Jersey, two silver Masonic badges were unearthed at a distance of five feet from the surface. No human remains were found near them, and the soil in which they were discovered is a compact slate. Their presence there is a mystery, in regard to the Masonic emblems, however, it is known that the early settlers, and even the Indians, were accustomed to wear them as a protection against danger. Brandt, the celebrated Indian warrior and chief, once saved the life of a white man during a battle, in consequence of the latter's signalling to him with the grand hailing Masonic sign of distress. In view of the general use of Masonic badges in those early days, the presence of those discovered in New Jersey might be satisfactorily explained.

THE SUGAR TRADE.—The New York Shipping and Commercial List presents in its issue of the 11th a very complete and elaborate statement of the sugar trade of the United States, from which we learn that the receipts of foreign sugar in the United States in 1870 were 468,957 tons, against receipts in 1869 of 501,354 tons, and th consumption of foreign in 1870 was 483,892 tons, against a consumption in 1869 of 447,899 tons; while the total consumption of foreign and domestic cane sugar in 1870 was 530,692 tons, against a total consumption in 1869 of 492,899 tons, an increase in the consumption of foreign in 1870, as compared with 1869, of 35,993 tons, or 8 per cent., and an increase in the consumption of foreign and domestic of 37,793 tons, or over seven and two-third per cent.

DON'T FRET.—"I dare no more fret," said John Wesley, "than to curse and swear." One who knew him well said that he never saw him lowspirited or fretful in his life. He could not endure the society of people who were of this habit. He says of them; "To have persons at my ears murmuring and fretting at every thing is like tearing the flesh from my bones. By the grace of God, I am discontented at nothing. I see God sitting on his throne, and ruling all things." If every one was of John Wesley's spirit, it would revolutionize the world. Christians lose all their sweet comforts and dishonor the Master, by their fretfulness over little troubles. Some who can bear the great sorrows of life with a martyr's faith and patience are utterly overthrown by the breaking of a vase. The temper is an unruly steed which must be kept in hand every moment.

ONE OF JOSH BILLINGS' PRAYERS.—From tu many friends, and from things at long ends, Good Lord deliver us!

From a wife who doant luv us, and from children who doant look like us, Good Lord deliver us!

From snaix in the grass, from snaix in our buttes, from torch lite processions, and from all new rum, Good Lord deliver us!

From pack-peddlers, from young folks in luv, from old aunts without money, from kolera morbus, Good Lord deliver us!

From wealth without charitee, from pride without sense, from pedigrees worn out, and from all rich relations, Good Lord deliver us!

From nuse paper sels, and from pils that aint fisik, from females that faint, and from men who flatter, Good Lord deliver us!

From virtue without fragrance, from butter that smells, and from cats that are courting, Good Lord deliver us!

From old folke's secrets, and from our own, from megiums and wimmin kimmittees, Good Lord deliver us!

From politicians who pray, and from saints who tipple, from ri kolh, red herring and awl grass widders, Good Lord deliver us!

From folks who won't laff, and from them who giggle, from titetuates, easy virtue, and raw mutton, Good Lord deliver us!

SOMETHING TO CHEER.—"I will tell you something to cheer you," said a poor woman to one of the mission school teachers. "One afternoon I was obliged to go, leaving my two children at home alone. I was kept out till long after dark. When I reached my door, I heard the little ones talking, and stopped to listen. 'I wish mother would come home, I am so afraid,' said Tommy. Little Mary spoke up. 'Don't cry, Tommy. Don't you know Jesus died for little children, and he'll take care of you and me; don't be afraid; let's sing.' Oh, I bless the hour when my children first went to the Sunday school," said the mother, with tears of gratitude in her eyes.
