

THE NATION'S CANDIDATES.

FOR PRESIDENT: HORACE GREELEY, OF NEW YORK.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT: GRATZ BROWN, OF MISSOURI.

CLOSING THE CAMPAIGN.

Wednesday closed the campaign which was opened by Judge Merriam and Gov. Caldwell, two months and a half ago, at Pittsboro. On the part of Judge Merriam, it has been conducted with dignity and marked propriety. On the part of Caldwell it has been just the reverse. Gov. Caldwell declined to make just appointments with our candidate. And will he night! Judge Merriam has added greatly to his fame as a public speaker and he may be justly ranked among the first public speakers in the State. It requires great physical and mental strength to conduct such a campaign.

Morhead, Graham, Bragg, Kerr, Sanders, Hoke and Gilmer have been reckoned among the best campaigners of our time. None of them, in solid convincing argument, excelled our candidate. He closed the labors of the campaign Wednesday at Company Shop, in a speech of two hours length.

Dinner was in order after Senator Tipton spoke. We did not see the table, but heard it was in every way creditable to the Almonsters. After dinner came Senator Schurz. His words are as heavy as the golden scepter Webster's, whose every word, on grand occasions, was said to have weighed a pound. Next came Gov. Walker, of Virginia, whose style is as commanding as his person. We shall not attempt any report of the speeches. They were listened to by an immense crowd of men, women and children of both races.

Being called upon we closed the exercises of the day and campaign by a few words of exhortation upon our duty, thanking Senators Schurz and Tipton, and Gov. Walker in the name of all present, for their speeches and canvass of the day. The meeting was a grand success, and some six or seven thousand were present.

After what we have written is read by our readers the decision will be over and the destiny of the State decided at the ballot-box. We cannot doubt of the result. We think the negro will be condemned.

THE CAMPAIGN.

The canvass for the last two months in this State has been one of no little excitement and vigor. It has been distinguished by the number of eminent men, both from this State and abroad, who have been actively engaged in discussing the momentous issues of the hour. In every section of the State, from the seaside to the mountains the people have gathered, eager to hear the distinguished orators who illustrated their canvass by a display of energy, eloquence and patriotism unparalleled in the annals of our State.

The speeches of our noble standard bearer, Judge Merriam, have attracted large, attentive, enthusiastic audiences. His masterly exposition of Radical fraud and slyness have told with terrible effect upon enemies. Numbers of good-conservative or fence-men and moderate republicans have been won by the power of his logic, and abandoned of past affiliation with the wretches who have ruined the State and trampled her honor in the dust, have repudiated Caldwell and the crew of thieves and cut-throats who nominated and supported him. The Conservative gain from this source alone, with more than counterbalancing the freemasonry gains our opponents have made by intimidating, repeating and colonizing negroes from other States.

RECONCILIATION THE WATCH-WORD.

The Courier-Journal, the leading Democratic paper of Kentucky, in referring to Mr. Greeley's last letter of acceptance, gives utterance to the following sentiments, expressive of the spirit of the present great movement of the people:

The terms of the new arrangement are set forth in the Liberal platform and in the two letters which Mr. Greeley has addressed the committees of the Cincinnati and Baltimore Conventions respectively. They are simple, easy, and direct. Embracing not only the results of the war, but the last of it; national and lasting peace they lay down for the South a rule of procedure—derived from the Declaration of Independence—by which the South can emancipate itself from the miserable prejudices and follies of the old school of purely sectional and provincial thought; a school which lost us our property, which lost us our peace, which lost us our power, which lost us all we had in the world except our manhood. This rule is simple, and it is just. It is the rule of right ought to be, free and equal; and that the spirit of the sections is a permanent union of equal states, based upon reciprocal interests and obligations, represented by a national constitution, and supported by local governments, with exact and equal rights carefully and exactly defined by the organic law. The South is required to make no sacrifices in order to restore itself to the fullest antebellum condition. It is asked simply to return to the principle of justice which has been the basis of our government since its origin, and to accept of no other.

Mr. Greeley may fairly rejoice, as we do, and as thoughtful and patriotic men do all over the South, that the age of hatred and crime, inaugurated by a party that secured by the sword, and by a more generous, elevating sympathy for the poor and suffering—that did not have a purer love excited for those humbler and more modest virtues that are often found in the lowly lanes of mankind! And the same question might be asked in reference to Scott and George Elliot, and in an eminent degree concerning the productions of George Macdonald, a new name in letters—at least new to many persons who will read these words.

George Macdonald is a Scotchman, and a man of genius. Both as poet and novelist he has established his right to be recognized as one of the foremost of living authors. He is only second as a writer of fiction among the contemporary living novelists to George Elliot, who is second to no writer either living or dead. Macdonald is, beyond all question, the most nobly endowed writer among the men of this day—who have taken fiction for the province of their genius or talent. He is incomparably greater than the other popular novelists who are sensational and false to the truest art—the Wilkie Collinses and Charles Dickens.

The productions of Macdonald are studies. He exhibits his poetic faculty in almost every page. His style is elegantly clear, complex and flexible. His descriptive powers are very great, abounding in those minute details that mark all great descriptive writers—Scott, Ruskin, Dickens, Thackeray, Eliot, and others. His imagination is strong and glowing, and as it is held always tightly in hand. His power to delineate character is original and striking. Indeed like all masters—like all men of genius who seek communion with other minds in the form of fiction, he has true creative art, and his characters have an individuality of their own. His men and women become your personal acquaintance, and you know them as distinctly from all others as you do the men and women you meet with in society. We repeat, George Macdonald is a genius—our copyist of others. He does not forget in worn-out lands, or enter the harvest fields after other gleaners have preceded him; but with his own bright sickle he cuts down the ripening grain that grows in his own broad fields.

His first work, admirable in many particulars—Assaiah of Quiet Neighborhood—gave him fame at once among the cultivated readers of his own land. His next work, Alice Forbes, not only confirmed the judgment of the critical world as to his uncommon power, but added to his already high reputation. It is a work of great confidence, and deserves to rank high among the fictions of the modern pen.

The work we have written at the head of this notice is his contribution to the literature of his time, and which we think is his highest name among the few great writers of fiction that the world possesses.

Wilfred Owen is a work of extraordinary power and interest. It is the production of a profound thinker and an ardent. Its psychological power is very great. There is a deep insight into the workings of the human mind manifested throughout. It analyzes some of the phases of life as only the hand of genius can. It is a painful story, but full of beauty and grandeur. It is a story of the teachings of the Redeemed Will is charming, and the whole book preaches to the heart with a force and persistence that a volume of sermons could not accomplish. Submission to the Divine Will is the text and lesson, and with transcendent eloquence and use they are driven home to the reader's mind and conscience. It is a rare book and will do good. The mere reader will turn away disappointed and displeased, for the profundities of this book will be unknown to him; no plumes of line of his will sound its depths. But the thoughtful, cultivated reader, who recognizes that a good novel has a mission to perform as a good man has his, and who turns to work of fiction for something else than mere pleasure or from a desire to relieve an oppressive mind, will find Wilfred Owen's tale a masterpiece with excellent. He will be fascinated with its transparent, terse, vigorous style, often taking into eloquence, with its deep emotions as the lightning strikes the nature and to art; with its steady character, so life-like, so well-defined, so individualized. He will find nothing that belongs to the regular routine of a novel, and much that belongs to the loftiest manifestations of creative art as expressed in the noblest works of fiction. We repeat George Macdonald has asserted his right to a high place among the great writers of his time, and so be mentioned with the few great names of the century—with Scott, the great countryman, with Dickens, Thackeray, Charlotte, Bronte and George Elliot. Now that Dickens has passed away, we repeat, there is no horetic left in whom we recognize as much genius as in George Macdonald, with the solitary exception of George Elliot—(Mrs. Lewis), the foremost woman of this or any age.

Books, Scribner & Co., have done well in publishing his prose works in such an inviting form. Thus far our author has produced four books, (poetry accepted), and all are well worth the attention of every intelligent reader.

We have been tempted to give an outline of the story, but remembering that we are not thankful to others for doing a work for us, we have preferred to let the work speak for itself. We have been much inclined to quote some passages, but want of space has prevented such an indulgence. We invite the reader to turn to the book itself and read those admirable passages we would have been glad to copy.

ADDITIONAL.

Its Thoughts in North Carolina—An Oration at Wadesboro—A Mob of Blacks near rural House—One Man severely Injured—More Attacks Apprehended.

We learn that there was a discussion at Lilesville, in Anson county, on Saturday last, between Hon. T. S. Ashe, Col. H. T. Bennett and J. M. Wall, Esq., concerning the affair at Wadesboro. James T. Arway and A. M. Boggs, radicals, who the colored men who were present were considerably wrought up at the appeals made to them by the radical speakers. As the conclusion of the discussion was not satisfactory to the radicals, a mob of whites, who had been formed into procession, and preceded by a fife and drum, marched to Wadesboro. On arriving at that town they proceeded to the house of Mr. Bennett and Mr. Wall, and Mr. Wall, who had been invited to the house, was severely injured. The mob then proceeded to the house of Mr. Wall, and Mr. Wall, who had been invited to the house, was severely injured.

The disturbance is attributed, in a great measure, to the influence of the Carvers, who have been acting as agitators in the South, who were equally instrumental in provoking the trouble that occurred here a few weeks ago.—W. Journal.

The knowledge of an ordinary town negro is limited enough; but it is wisdom compared with his ordinary country cousin. "You," said Mr. R. to one of his head farmers, in a high-dignified tone upwards of 300 "bauds" were at work "how many of these can read or write?" "Not one," said the reply, "and Jim Crow, him spell my letters berry little." This was true. Out of the whole number, not one could read or write. Their ignorance is a disgrace to the law for the colored man who could read or write intelligently.

TWO ANECDOTES OF GENERAL LEE.

A correspondent of the Courier-Journal, writing from Lexington, recalls these reminiscences of Lee: "While in command of the Virginia force in the early spring of 1861, he was visited by a prominent abolitionist, who called him little boy, with a beautiful copy of the Scriptures which he wished to present to General Lee. The General received the gift with evident pleasure and cordial thanks, saying that he could not but be gratified by the gift, and that he would be glad to have the little fellow, who had come with the gift, to read to him in his camp. The General's heart was touched, and he said to the little fellow, 'You will be put to school, and you will be a man, and you will be a Christian, and you will be a good man, and you will be a great man, and you will be a noble man, and you will be a wise man, and you will be a brave man, and you will be a true man, and you will be a loyal man, and you will be a patriotic man, and you will be a devoted man, and you will be a faithful man, and you will be a diligent man, and you will be a hard-working man, and you will be a persevering man, and you will be a patient man, and you will be a
