A HAPPY CHRISTMAS.

The anniversary of the Nativity of our Lord Jesus Christ is supposed to be to day. The evidence in favor of the 25th the best writers and commentative supmonth of May, We have not the space and time at our command now, to give tere we feel warranted 'in saying, that the evidence is quite conclusive that what ver the natal day of our blessed Enviour was, indeed did lay saide his pre-existent glory | Goldsmith said of Dr. Johnton. in which I edwelt before the foundations of the world were laid, and wrapping about Him the habiliments of flesh, did condescend to be "born of a woman," and to becom : " the man of sorrows, acquainted with grief," that the children of men might not be destroyed necessarily in the Last Day by a consuming wrath, but through faith in Him who died for the sins of all men, might become participants in the bhatitudes of Heaven. Every grateful heart must thank Almighty God forwhich a Savjour, and it is highly appropriate that some season of rejoicing should be appointed by the Church for special graine and thanksgiving to our Heavenly Father, for the "gift of his dear.

im in his new enterprise. May thousands of the noble-hearted men lowler; we cannot regard the apprehensions pathy. And so it is our strain that ought to be resonant with hope and eloquent with praise, is lugubrious. We trust this will be a happy Christmas to all our readers. We wish one and that are harmless, and that many retarns of bright, jocund December days may be with life, and no more Holidaya shall return to them on earth, may they ail be through the merits of that Redcemer whose birth-day we celebrate.

STYLR.

The most difficult thing in writing is to be simple. Any man familiar with the pen and with our English lexicon can use high-sounding words-words that are December is very alim. He was born, as twice as large as the thoughts to be ex. pressed. A chaste, pure and lucid style is an uncommon gift, and whilst we have many writers, we have but few who can bear Deau Swift's test-himself one of the arguments in favor of this conclusion, the best of writers and yet one of the simplest-invariably using "proper words in proper places." | Men whose s ie is poor, as is the cas with nincty nine hun it was not the 25th December. But as by dreths who are addicted to the pen, de common consent that day of the calendar light in Johnsonian sentences and tinsel has been set apart as a great Christian fes- rh storic. A man has achieved a good tival, it is not for us to insist that the daal who is content to express hiuself in time should be changed, or that some simple, clear, easy, outural diction. Inexother day should be observed. In com perienced writers are sure to mistake mon with others, we should rejoice that flashy terms for true brilliancy, and to there is a Saniour of sinners, and that He make "litt'e fishes talk as whates" as

> To say what you have to say clearly, explicitly, concisely, is a rare gift. Lord Msqualay said that " Obscurity and offeetation are the two greatest faults of style." Our advice to all writers is to strive to be simple, and not to be grandiese.

> We wish to copy a few pregnant suggestions and remarks from some great writers, and hope they will be carefully considered by many who may chance to read these lines. We are confident that no intellectual man can ponder their meaning, and copy it into his own efforts at composition without, deriving decided beacfit.
