The stalls in the Market House at Raieigh roat this year for $5,821. Good regulations are entorced in the Raleigh market, and crowds of lazy, idle negroes are not allowed to block up the passages, Besides that, all the propert, holders of Raleigh are made to pay some tax, and it is collected from all property holders and not from a comparative few. Besides, urther, when the City of Raleigh is unable to pay its debts it stops going in debt. We judge so from the fact that the gas has been stopped from the street lamps.—Char. Dem.

History has it that though centing for a good round sum, the statis in the Ruleigh market have not proved a source of rey mue to the city.

As to the good regulations, friend Yates' must be writing from heresay. Idle negroes are allowed to block up the passages; and they so block up the sidealks in front of the market house as to compel white people, ladies as well as gentlemen, to take the street, libwever muddy it may be, to get past.

The theory is that all property holders n Raleigh are made to pay some tax ; the prudice 18 so so.

We admire the facetionsness of our co temporary in saving that "when the city of Raleigh is unable to pay its debts it cops going in debt," and when it adds. "judges so from the fact that the gas has been stopped from the street lamps !" The city of Raleigh is head over heels in debt, but to what amount no mortal can tell. It is true the streets are in darkness and have long been so, but not from me tives of economy. The authorities have been, in the meanthme, economising by spending some $100 per week - some say in spoiling the streets, and are now engaged in a lavish expenditure of money in laying out fancy public parks, having already, at the State's expense, one of the handsomest parks in the country, and this, too, while they refuse to pay the coupons on the $50,000 bonded debt. No more of your joking, Mr. Democrat.

With all the beauties of our city government, there is a feature in that of Charlotte and other cities we would like to see added, viz : that of publishing mouthly or even yearly, the details of the Treasurer's receipts and disbursements In our blest city no one, outside of the city government, knows what amount of revenue goes into the city treasury or what ever becomes of it.
