TORAX TAX DECISION.—A decision has just been rendered by the commissioner of Internal Revenue, which is of much importance to the tobacco trade. The commissioner, in reply to a question as to "whether tobacco stamped at 20 cts. per pound under the old law is entitled when exported to a drawback of 22 cts., or only 20 cts. per pound, the present tax, and whether it makes any difference in what district the tobacco was stamped," says that under the provision of the act of June 6, 1872, a drawback for such tobacco will be allowed to the full extent of the stamps affixed, and that it is not material as to the district in which the tax has been paid. The effect of this ruling is regarded as very favorable to tobacco dealers, especially the jobbers, as in disposing of their old stock they will be entitled to the drawback of 22 cts. a pound, and in laying in their new stock will be subjected only to the tax of 20 cts. a pound.

OUR INDUSTRIAL ENTERPRISES.

It is our purpose, from time to time, to speak of the industrial enterprises of the city of Raleigh, and of the distinguished men in the arts and sciences in our midst. We commence this series of papers with a sketch of

JAMES PIRSSON, PIANO MANUFACTURER.

We were shown, on yesterday, the handsome silver medal of the North Carolina State Agricultural Society, some time since presented to Mr. Pirsson of this city, for the best piano forte exhibited at our late State Fair. It is large and beautifully executed, and bears the following inscription: "Awarded by the North Carolina State Agricultural Society to James Pirsson for the best Piano."

In the interest of our State industries, and with a view of placing Mr. Pirsson, before our people in his true light, we propose, in as brief a manner as possible, to let our readers know what and who Mr. Pirsson is. We are in possession of abundant materials for this purpose, and everything we say of him will be taken from the record.

James Pirsson was born—in the city of New York in 1806, and served an apprenticeship to one of the leading Piano Manufacturers of that city, acquiring, by his talents and industry, a thorough knowledge of the business.

During this apprenticeship, having a passion for music, he diligently pursued the study and practice of that art, as may be gathered from what follows.

He worked at his business as a journeyman for a few years, in the meantime devoting himself to the study of music, and then began the manufacture of pianos on his own account, and soon took rank as the leading "maker" of the city, with a force of about seventy-five men, turning out some ten instruments weekly. Amongst the journeymen employed by Mr. Pirsson can be named the late Henry Steiway, of the firm of Steiway & Son, N. Y., the late F. C. Light, of the firm of Light & Broadbent, N. Y., and others. Of the character of Mr. Pirsson's pianos at this time, and of the character of the man, we have evidence in numerous extracts from leading New York papers, especially preserved in a scrap book now before us. From the New York Express and the Musical Times we learn that his instruments had for years been solicited for the principal concerts; that for "beauty, style and finish and tone," they could not be excelled in this or any other country; that "the mechanical ability of Mr. Pirsson was unsurpassed" that "in implicit confidence could be placed in his assurances of the quality of his instruments," and that he ranked "with the first artists as a musician and mechanic."

Mr. Pirsson was the first to manufacture the Grand Piano, in New York, and to introduce the iron frame. In 1850 he had outstripped all competition by inventing and making the celebrated Double Grand Piano, for which he obtained letters patent. This piano took the musical world by surprise. It was exhibited at Mr. Pirsson's private saloons for a length of time, and thoroughly tested and universally admired. It was taken by him to the World's Fair in London, in 1851, was played upon, amongst other celebrities, by Queen Victoria, (who highly complimented the inventor and maker, through the American Commissioner,) and received a golden medal, whilst in competition with all others, including those of the Chickering. On Mr. P.'s return to the United States the medal of the New York State Agricultural Society was awarded to him for the distinction his instrument had won for American enterprise and skill. Mr. Pirsson also was the recipient of the medal of the American Institute.

Of this Double Grand Piano, the Evening Post says, and the remarks of the Post are fully endorsed and enlarged upon by the Musical Times: "A PLEASANT EVENING.—We made one of a large party of musical critics and amateurs invited to examine the monster Piano manufactured by Mr. James Pirsson, a maker well known and esteemed by every musical person. There was a good congregation of artists present, with not a few of the 'trade,' and we believe that no instrument was ever more thoroughly tested. This monster piano is a variety of novelty; at least in our long connection with the musical world, we saw on the other side, we know of nothing, as any way resembling it. The idea is a very simple one, and probably for that reason it has been overlooked; but this fact demands particular notice, that if the thought has been carried out, it must have been a failure in its result, as the world would have known of it. The instrument in question is intended to apply the principle of two Grand Pianos. It is in itself a double instrument, with two sets of keys, two sets of strings, distinct pedals, &c., in short, it is two perfect instruments in one. The arrangement is a masterpiece of mechanical skill and ingenuity. Our readers may imagine the extraordinary care required in bearing the instrument; in rendering its strength equal to the enormous strain which it has to sustain—a strain of over forty tons! We have examined it thoroughly, in company with makers of good repute, and we find the judgment of every one is that its construction is perfect, and that it is as strong as wood and iron can make it. In two key boards of cast-iron, and out of four persons playing upon it at once, but Mr. Pirsson has arranged a device by which the two instruments can be connected. By the application of a simple but ingenious machinery, one player can produce the tones of two instruments simultaneously, and thus secure a body of four, but possibly to be obtained by any other means. The uniqueness of this instrument cannot be denied; it is a most gratifying illustration of the skill and energy of our pianoforte makers. Of the successful application of a novel idea, we must express our unqualified approbation; its success has exceeded the most sanguine expectations of the maker and his friends. But if Mr. Pirsson has succeeded in carrying out the form of his design, he has also succeeded in manufacturing two of the finest grand pianos yet produced in America. In body of tone, in roundness, purity and brilliancy, they are unsurpassed. The bass is magnificent. The lightness and elasticity of their touch were commented upon, and warmly praised by all present. Mr. Pirsson is a right hospitable man, and constantly through the year, the best artists congregate at his house and perform the highest class of music. These evenings are the most delightful that the city affords. The quality of the performance, designed to display the capabilities of the instrument, was choice in the extreme.

Mr. P. is constantly engaged in Piano Forte making for over fifty years. Of Mr. Pirsson's musical abilities much might be said. He was a member of the N. Y. Euterpean Society; one of the founders of the N. Y. Philharmonic Society, and played the double bass in the orchestra for several years, and is now an honorary member of that society, and was organist in several of the principal churches of New York for thirty years. The private saloons of Mr. Pirsson were for years as celebrated in New York, as his boundless hospitality—one of which we see recorded by the Express, and at which "about one hundred and fifty ladies and gentlemen partook of an excellent supper." Present on such occasions might be seen such professionals as Strakoski, Max Marotzek, Wallace, Timm, Burke, H. Bonn, Schaefer, Esfeldt, Boeber, Hornstedt, De Meyer, Schmitz and his German band, &c.; such distinguished amateurs of the city; such distinguished personages as Bishop Wainwright and Dr. Putz, of the clergy; Dr. Quid, Judge Daly, Judge Brady, J. W. Gerard, Dos Alonzo Gusham, Anson Livingston and others, of the laity. During the winter of 1851-'52, the perfect Emperor of Russia, then grand Duke Alexander, was present at several of these soirees, he then being on his tour throughout the United States, under the name of "Mr. Pfeiffer." The Press and the Stage were ever welcome at the home of Mr. Pirsson.

Reverend for years, by destructive fire, &c., with accumulating years, compelled Mr. Pirsson to abandon his extensive manufacturing business, and he has a year-and-a-half himself to dealing in the pianos of the great Union Piano Company of New York, made expressly for him, and to the repair of pianos and organs.

During the last seventeen years Mr. Pirsson has been a resident of North Carolina, chiefly of Wilmington and Raleigh. As a musician and manufacturer of pianos the name of Mr. Pirsson is not confined to his native land, but may be found ranking with the first in both capacities, in the standard works of Europe.

Raleigh and North Carolina can boast of James Pirsson as a most distinguished musician and mechanic and an exemplary gentleman.

POVERTY A BLESSING.—Look so and you upon the distinction in a that in every department of life, the guide and control the times, and as a general rule they were not rocket and ravel in the lap of wealth and luxury. The lesson of decent competence or struggling poverty and forth the men of nerve and resolute purpose. In early life they learn the art of renunciation, and accommodate their wants according to their slender means. They know nothing of indolence or idleness, and when with a noble ambition they commence the journey of life they put their "own shoulders" to the wheel, their own hands to the oar. Onward and upward by their motto—poverty and privations have no terror for them, and removing each obstacle as it presents itself, their untiring energy and determined will soon bring its own reward. Poverty is often truly a blessing in disguise; and those who spend and look down on their fellow-men, merely on account of their poverty, it is to be pitied more than blamed.

CITY COUPON.

HALEIGH, JAN. 8, 1873.

MR. SENTINEL: In your issue of 1-day you state that the amount of the $50,000 bonded debt of the city of Raleigh is in arrears. This is a mistake, as holders of the coupons of said bond, will learn if they will present them to the Citizens' National Bank of Raleigh.

Truly, KEMP P. HAYLER, Com. Banking Firm City of Raleigh. We stated yesterday that the authorities of the city of Raleigh refuse to pay the coupons on this funded debt. Our statement was based upon that of a gentleman of this city, holding a large amount of the bonds, who informed us that he had recently presented some of his coupons for payment, and that payment had been refused. The gentleman in question will be pleased with the information conveyed in Mr. Hayler's note.

THREE OR FOUR persons can obtain certificates from a private family. Apply at the box street, etc.

GEN. R. F. HOSK and lady are registered at the National.

It is likely the proceedings of the Superior Court will be interesting to-day as the trial of capital offences will be commenced.

READ the advertisement of Wayne Allcott, Wholesale and Retail Grocer, & Fayetteville Street, the late stand of Julius Lewis & Co. We wish the gentlemen the best success. This is a popular stand and has been made so by liberal advertising in the SENTINEL, thus enabling the citizens of Raleigh and surrounding country to know what was kept there. For instance, the hardware business of Julius Lewis & Co. has been so rapidly that these goods have had to increase their stock. The same success to you, Mr. Allcott.

OBITUARY.

Entered upon the life immortal, on the 25th of December, 1872, Miss Claudia E. Waddell, of Wilmington, N. C., daughter of the late John Waddell, of Brunswick, and grand-daughter of the heroic Gen. Francis Nash. Endowed by nature with an amiable, generous and self-sacrificing disposition, and having cast devoted herself to the service of the Lord, she continued in her daily life the loftiest characteristics of a Christian gentleman.

She was one of those to whom it is appointed, through much tribulation, to enter joyful life, and the patience, fortitude and courage with which she bore her many trials, taught those whose privilege it was to be intimate with her, that the martyr spirit is confined to no age, or era, of the church. In the long-agonizing illness of the past three years, wherein the great Redeemer was purely paying away transgressions from our humanity, her patience, sweetness and gentleness shone forth so brightly that we can truly apply to her, St. Paul's grand psalm of triumph and song: "She has fought a good fight, she has finished her course, she has kept the faith, and henceforth there is laid up for her a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give her at that day," in which the apostle says: "I desire to depart, and to be with Christ."

On the 26th inst., at 5 a. m., near Eagle Rock, Wake county, Miss Ann Ferrell, after an illness of six months, aged 36 years. She leaves an affectionate husband and eight children to mourn her loss. Deceased has been a member of the Baptist church for the last twenty-two years, and shortly before her death expressed her belief in a happy future. Burial service on Monday.
