Saxe. And although born in a northern clime, on the cold soil of New England, although cradled amidst the Green Mountains of Vermont, in his heart. he is like his fame, is not bounded by State lines or geographical limits. It is broad enough and deep enough to em-brace his whole country. A man with such a fame needs no introduction to this audience. And I cannot forbear to add that during the sanguinary conflict that rent asunder the two section of this country-a conflict when the human passions reached their fiercest height—a conflict in which northern fanaticism and hatred, and prejudice towards the South surged and rolled in intense fury and madness— during all that conflict it cannot be said of Mr. Saxe that any one word of anger toward the South, or its institutions, escapen his lips; nor can we find in any of his poems one line, or a single sentiment, of reproach or anger, or of bitterness to-wards the South and her institutions.

Dr. Mason, was on the subject of the future state; the text: 4th and 5th verses of the First Epistle of Peter. In the evening, also preached by the pastor, from the text: " Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbors unto him that fell among the thieves. And he said: He that showed mercy unto him." In the case of the Samaritan, his acts were all works of a genuine benevolence. There was a renunciation of national and religious prejudices. There was self-denial. Both of the sermons were listened to with the most marked attention and, no doubt, will be productive of great prac-

"He that believeth on me, the works that I up, as I told you last Sunday, is for the do shall be do also; and greater works than these shall be do, because I go to my father."

John 14 chap., 12 verse. The morning sermon was from the text;

Jesus wrought miracles to prove he was more than man. He imparted the power of working them to his disciples, as irrefu-table peool of the divine origin of the Pagas opposition and human depravity in general, rendered it meessary. The power is work them was withdrawn in the account century and has not been restore.i.

Why are they not wrought to-day? Why are they not wrought to-day! The church First, as to Pagan lands, because of the tesse of purity and faith in the disciples of Jenus. They are needed in China as much as in Lystra or Ephesus. The normally existing, only the human conditions are wanting; for Jesus promised the power to those who believed. Secondly, as to most of Christendom, miracles are not wrought because they are no longer needed. Christendom still has the und miracles. "And if it appear still in the garment, either in the warp, or in the wood, or in anything of skin, it is a spreading plague; thou shalt burn that wherein the plague is with fire."

Leprosy illustrated the nature of sin. The thought of the judgment is a thought, to the sinner, of extremist peril. Its coming is uncertain. It is to be "as a thief in the night." The sinner knows he is not prepared. Conviction and overthrow are sure to befall him before such a fear, and the penalty is awful and eternal.
