"A Londos physician who loves his tea has been analyzing some samples recently, and finds them to contain forty per cent of iron filings, nineteen per cent, of fine sand, and a good deal of green paint. The Doctor calls this adulteration, and attributes it to a love of flithy lucre; but a more charitable view to take of it is to believe that the ingenions tea merchant only wanted to infuse a little iron and grit into the constitution of his patrons. We have no apology to offer for the paint,

A Trader.

We learn that on Wednesday last Wm. Edwards, a baker of this city, employed a colored man by the name of Henry Mc-Ferson, to peddle his bread and cakes in the city. Henry started out on Wednesday morning with a besket full of choice bread and cakes. Night came on but Henry did not put in au appearance and Edwards started out in search of his missing agent. After a search of several hours he found him at the North Carolina depot minus six dollars worth of bread and cakes and in the act of selling the empty basket It seems that Edwards hired the man without examining his ref. grences. We are led to this conclusion when we remember that Henry has just served out a term of imprisonment in the Pentientiary for the crime of manulaughter. He had only been out a few days when he took the agency.
