Hon. A. H. Stephens, author and states, man, we regret to learn, has become thoroughly demented. The first indication of insanity occurred at Athens, Georgia, on August 4th. He was attending the commencement exercises of the University of Georgia and was orator for the day before the Literary Societies. He ascended the rostrum amid the wildest outbursts of enthusiasm. As soon as silence was restored, leaning upon his crutches, the once able and well poised Southron began his address. It soon became apparent that he was for the time at least laboring under a severe mental aberation. That he was unmistakably crazy will appear to the Richmond Ra-the Associate last year, when they read the following extract from the Atlanta Herald : "Alex. Stephens delivered the atldress to the two Societies this afternoon at o'clock.
