The Growth of Good Templarism. The wonderful rapidity that marked the growth of the order of Good Templars was never equalled in the history of voluntary organizations. Its succeeding decline, though not rapid, reached so low an ebb that it was virtually in a dying condition. The revival of the order, and the steady increase of the number of lodges, is as great a phenomenon as is exhibited in its early blatory. The Spring neld Union, in commenting upon the growth of the order, gives the following facts and figures: In 1854 the first lodge was instituted, the locality being Oneida county, New York, Within four years the opter had extended throughout the Ohio and Lake valleys, though not into New England.

valleys, though not into New England, and in 1855 the representatives of ten gracil iodges met at Cleveland and instituted the Hight Worshipful Grand Lodge of North America. In 1856 the order numbered 65,722 members. From 1856 to 1858 the membership fell off over 18,000. During the coming five years it greatly fluctuated, and in 1853 numbered but 27,000.
