

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION. Daily... Weekly... Monthly...

The Daily Sentinel

VOL. IX.

RALEIGH, N. C., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1873.

NO. 67.

Advertisements... Rates... Terms...

Post Office Directory.

RALEIGH POST OFFICE ARRANGEMENTS. Office hours from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. daily...

HAPPY ARRIVALS.

YANBOROUGH HOUSE. G. W. Blackwell, proprietor. T. M. Holt, Haw River; E. R. Link, D. Morris, Wilmington; M. S. Shepard, Wm B Shepard, child and servant, Norfolk, Va; G. N. Walter, J. F. Ellington, J. W. Whitsett, Charlotte; J. B. H. True, Hatter Run, So. Ca; J. A. Norton, N. C.; L. E. Burroughs, Austin, Texas; P. J. Boman, N. Y.; J. M. Callan, Raleigh; H. I. Marshall, Richmond; J. J. Garner, E. City; Saml Ruffin, Ala; A. M. Nobb, Selma; John Winston, D. H. McKinnon, Canada; J. M. Wilson, Wilson's Mills; J. Van Hoy Nash, Petersburg, Va.

NORTH CAROLINA.

First Cotton. - The first shipment of cotton direct from Atlanta North over the Air Line passes through here to-night, amounting to 800 bales. - Greensboro Post.

Judge Boyden continues very ill. There has been no such change in his condition within the week as to afford hope of speedy recovery. We regret to add that Mrs. Boyden is not quite so well as usual this morning. - Salisbury Watchman.

POSTPONED. - The fall term of Davidson Superior Court will not commence until Monday of the second week, being the 31 of November. In consequence of sickness in his family, Judge Casson will be unable to be present during the first week. - Winston Sentinel.

N. W. N. C. R. R. - The Salem and Greensboro Railroad has been doing a handsome business during the short time it has been in operation, in travel and freight. It is a fact that the very great expectation of its most sanguine friends. - Salisbury Press.

HIGHWAY ROBBER CAPTURED AND LOOSED IN JAIL. - The negro who knocked Mr. Geo. Newton down and robbed him of his pocket-book on Tuesday evening the 14th inst., and gave his name as Robert Johnson, has been arrested and lodged in jail. His name is James Adams, is nearly black, about 19 years of age. - Fayetteville Gazette.

GRAPES. - Our thanks are due Mr. N. W. Craft, of Red Plains, Surry county, for a lot of splendid grapes, from his extensive vineyard, embracing five or six varieties in all excellent preservation. There was one notable specimen, 'the Saligo,' which far excelled the Iona, Catawba, Ives, Norton, etc., etc., in respect to size and beauty, it was also in flavor. Samples of these grapes were on exhibition at our Fair. - Salisbury Watchman.

The Rev. Noah Corzall, colored, who about 15th Sept. last, received from his wife, who he had been flogging, a baptism of scalding water, has so far recovered from the dangerous condition as to be able to come to town and attend to usual duties. In speaking of his late dramatic undertakings, on Monday the very grave and life remarking that the grand error of his life was that of marrying an ugly woman. - Salisbury Watchman.

REAR OF FIBROUS ANTERIOR FOR COMPLAINT IN THE CONSTITUTION. - SIXTY-SIX YEARS IN CONFINEMENT. - GREENSBORO, N. C., October 23. - The names of the constitutionists brought here by Deputies Bosh and Shaver, and straggled before United States Commissioner Hardin today are as follows: William R. Black-welder, Pyma Bradshaw, Daniel Lips, Edmond Lips, William A. Houck, and C. F. Louder. Five were listed in the sum of $4,000 each to appear at this place on Thursday before Commissioner H. C. Louder, in default of $10,000 each, was committed. Seven others are expected here hourly. David Earnhart and J. A. Louder escaped on their route hither. Sixty-eight arrests have been made in addition to the names given above, all of whom arrived at Asheville last night in charge of the officers. These offenders belong to the band whose leader (the notorious McPee) was executed a year since. - Special to Rich Dispatch.

A DANGEROUS DISEASE. - No disease which does not attack a man as he has so completely maddened him for business as dyspepsia. When the stomach is full, the brain is always excited and confused, and as the organs and activities of life are a sufficient burden for the organs of thought to bear, without being tormented by the minutes born of indigestion, it is highly desirable for the brain's sake, as well as for the sake of every other portion of the system, that the disordered stomach should be restored with the utmost dispatch by a healthy, vigorous condition. This object can be accomplished by a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the purest and best of vegetable specifics which ever existed, and which tones the stomach and regulates the liver, imparts firmness to the nerves and clears the membrane of its mental contents, restores the system to its normal condition, and is a powerful remedy for all the ailments which attend indigestion, biliousness, irregularity of the bowels, sickness, and all the ailments of the stomach, or "the blues," which attack the nervous system, or twice a day throughout the present season.

ONE-HALF ACRE FOR INVESTMENT. - One-half acre lot on Fayetteville street, opposite Rev. Knip B. Bath, fronting 105 feet on Fayetteville and the same on Wilmington street, is offered for sale. Terms one-fourth cash and the balance in the equal installments of one, two and three years' credit with interest from date. Title good. Apply to E. W. Fox, Oct 23rd.

MILLER & CLIFTON having entered into partnership, have filed up the establishment known as Frazer's old stand, in excellent style for the Hotel and Boarding House. Plans elegant carpets, newly papered rooms, and a large spacious Billiard Hall, Oct 23rd.

HOME AFFAIRS.

Suspended. - The editor was asked yesterday on the stand if Pat Carrow had drawn the money for the new post office, and then suspended the work.

Personal. - We had the pleasure of a visit at our office yesterday of Hon. A. M. Waddell, M. C. from Wilmington District, and from S. F. Tomlinson, Esq., late Principal of the Deaf & Dumb Institute, but now of Durham.

A Curiosity. - How many of the people of Raleigh know that imbedded in a block of granite in the southern front of our capitol there is a well-defined snake. It will be found on the left side of the southwest window of the Executive office.

Correction. - In referring to the beautiful lamp in front of Messrs. Miller & Clifton, it read Miller & Freeman. It should have been Miller & Clifton. The error was made, no doubt, by Mr. Freeman's being connected with the restaurant of these gentlemen.

Advice to Farmers. - Cotton is gradually going down. It is believed that this is a result of combination among speculators. It is no doubt a bad time to sell. We advise the farmers to keep their cotton at home at present. Do not send it to market. If you can afford to hold it, do so. This seems to be what you ought to do.

"Sea Gift." - The Associate has a copy of this book on the way from New York. He proposes reading it and writing such a notice as he thinks it deserves. An earlier notice would have appeared if his copy had come to hand. "Sea Gift" is from the pen of Edwin W. Fuller, of Louisville, N. C., a gentleman of superior gifts.

Mrs. Pinckard's Book. - Mrs. Pinckard, the Georgia lady who was in Raleigh some time ago, is now at Oxford. She writes us that her publisher, Mr. Slater, had not sent her the number of copies of her book she was expecting, but she expects to receive some more very soon. As soon as they come to hand she will return to Raleigh and deliver them to subscribers. The Associate informs her, that he has not received her book, and until her letter came to hand, did not know that she had left a copy for him.

The Weldon Fair. - We are glad to learn from Dr. H. E. T. Manning, Assistant Secretary of Roanoke and Tar River Agricultural Association, that more entries have been made up to this time than they ever had before. A fine time and a large crowd are expected. A dance at the Emory House will come off every night. Weldon has always been a pleasant place during Fair time, and the exhibition in the past has been of a most creditable sort. We hope a large crowd will be in attendance and that the enjoyment will be as perfect as possible.

Death of a Good Woman. - We are pained to record the death of Mrs. Julia A. Hooker, of Hillsboro, who died at the house of her daughter, Mrs. Abby, near Winston. Mrs. Hooker, had been in feeble health for several years and her death was not unlooked for. Her life was all gentleness, grace, and love of God and his works could make it. In all the relations of life she acted well her part, whether as wife, mother, neighbor or friend. The children, the grand children, the poor and the friends will all miss her, and all sigh, saying, "I wish grand ma was here." But she has gone never to return, but to enter upon that rest which remaineth unto the people of God.

Franklin Steam Washer. - From all the evidence we have before us, we are compelled to believe that this North Carolina invention is decidedly the best washer now before the country. We are not writing a "puff," but stating what we conceive to be the truth and nothing but the truth. The gentlemen who own it are citizens of Louisville, and of high character for integrity and enterprise. Notice the character of those who certify as to its great value. The list embraces gentlemen and ladies named in some of our social standing and intelligence is that part of the State. Every housewife needs this washer and it is a course every husband will make the purchase. In fact every woman is interested in it. We are glad to hear that the proprietors are meeting with a large sale.

Business Items. - The Female Academy opened last Thursday night. Judge Boyden is lying quiet in his parlour in this city. A revival of religion is progressing at the Methodist Church. John G. Williams, Esq., of Raleigh, is here to-day attending court. H. Williams makes a fine lawyer, though young in the profession. Stoneville Letter. - The Federal Court is in session here this week. A large number of values present. The Female Academy opened last Thursday night. Judge Boyden is lying quiet in his parlour in this city. A revival of religion is progressing at the Methodist Church. John G. Williams, Esq., of Raleigh, is here to-day attending court. H. Williams makes a fine lawyer, though young in the profession. Stoneville Letter. - The Federal Court is in session here this week. A large number of values present. The Female Academy opened last Thursday night. Judge Boyden is lying quiet in his parlour in this city. A revival of religion is progressing at the Methodist Church. John G. Williams, Esq., of Raleigh, is here to-day attending court. H. Williams makes a fine lawyer, though young in the profession. Stoneville Letter. - The Federal Court is in session here this week. A large number of values present. The Female Academy opened last Thursday night. Judge Boyden is lying quiet in his parlour in this city. A revival of religion is progressing at the Methodist Church. John G. Williams, Esq., of Raleigh, is here to-day attending court. H. Williams makes a fine lawyer, though young in the profession.

Lecture of Hon. A. M. Waddell.

This distinguished representative in Congress from the Wilmington District lectured to a large, elegant and appreciative audience in Metropolitan Hall last night in behalf of the suffering and dying of Memphis. He was felicitously and eloquently introduced by our gifted townsman, Maj. Seaton Gales, who we take leave to say, par excellence, excels any person we have ever known on such occasions. Col. Waddell's lecture was a highly interesting, elaborate and ingenious discussion of the early settlement of our State. Having recently published an admirable resume of it from the pen of Prof. W. G. Simmons, of Wake Forest College, we will not at the late hour at which we write undertake any synopsis. It must be heard to be appreciated. His object was to show that there was a vast deal of evidence which could be adduced to establish the fact that five hundred years before Columbus had his discoveries, the Irish crossed the Atlantic and discovered North Carolina. Although the character of his discourse was recitative, argumentative and scientific, he was listened to with marked attention. His closing remarks were elegantly conceived, and appealing as they were to the North Carolina heart, he was warmly applauded. We can assure intelligent and cultured people that the lecture is well worth hearing.

Book Notice. - THE OXFORD METHODISTS. By Rev. L. Tyerman. Harper & Brothers, New York. This is by the author whose life of John Wesley, in three volumes, has attracted so much attention in England and in this country. The leading periodicals of Great Britain reviewed it in terms pronouncing a high opinion as to its merits. The present volume is a companion one, as it supplements the other, giving interesting biographical sketches of eight or ten of the ministers who belonged to the "Holy Club," as the deicides called the eighteen young men (Wesley among them) who constituted what is now known as "the Oxford Methodists."

CONSPICUOUS AND WEALTHY CITIZENS. - The young chronicler gives the following list of the "conspicuous and wealthy citizens of Raleigh": "Judge Duncan Cameron, President of the Bank of the State, extremely wealthy; William Boylan, equally so; Judge Saunders, member of Congress; Gen. Ireddell, formerly Governor; Hon. J. H. Bryan, formerly in Congress; Wm. H. Hayward; Washington Hayward; Charles Masly; Weston B. Gales; Hugh McQueen; Henry W. Miller; J. R. J. Daniel; J. B. Shepard; Gen. Patterson, President of the Raleigh & Gaston Railroad; George W. Morehead, formerly President of the Raleigh & Gaston Railroad; Thomas Devaux, whose father, John Devaux is the wealthiest man in the State, his wife inheriting the Pollock estate which included nine hundred slaves and land bordering on the Roanoke river to the extent of twenty-five miles; Richard Smith, the wealthiest merchant in Raleigh. The Hayward family is among the oldest and most respectable in the city. The family of Col. Polk, deceased, is among the wealthiest of the city. (He continues the list.) Wm. F. Collins, Controller; William Hill, Secretary of State; Wm. and Joseph Pass, among the oldest, richest and most respectable citizens; Hinton Hunter, Treasurer of State; James Edwards, Sheriff of Wake county--the man and liked by everybody; Richard Finch, Superior Court Clerk; and James T. Maxwell, County Court Clerk--both clever men; Dr. Beckwith and Dr. Felt, Haywood, and physicians and clever gentlemen--and many hundred others who are in high standing in point of wealth, talents and respectability." He also names "the Judge of the Supreme Court who resided here during the session of the Court--WILLIAM GASTON, first man in the State, Chief Justice Ruffin and Judge Daniel."

Raleigh, he sets down (1858) with a population of 3,000. After a sketch of the style of the then city government, he proceeds: "Joseph Gales, Sen. deceased, was the first Mayor of Raleigh, afterwards Weston B. Gales, for several years. Joseph Gales held the office when he died; Weston B. Gales resigned, but can be elected any time he chooses."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

RALEIGH SOME FORTY YEARS AGO.

Extracts from a Boy's Journal.

Some forty years ago there came to this city, from the State of New Hampshire, a sprightly, intelligent boy, some thirteen years of age. Having a near relative here, he settled in Raleigh and learned the art of printing in the office of the "Raleigh Register," Joseph Gales, Sen., and Weston B. Gales, Editors and Proprietor, entering that office on the last of May, 1837. This boy grew to be a prosperous man amongst us and died in his adopted city in 1873.

We have before us a journal written by the young printer, commenced in 1838 and extending over but a few years. It contains many interesting reminiscences and accounts of several nearly-forgotten incidents connected with our city and its public and private actors. "Some forty years ago," from which we propose to draw from time to time. The reader will bear in mind that we make the extracts from the journal of a boy, and he will not fail to see that he was a bright boy, of more than ordinary powers of observation, at least.

The boy's description of our city, which he entered "on a Sunday evening in the Fall of the year 1836," is singularly truthful and complete, but we pass over that. In his record of the Register printing establishment, he does not forget his earliest instructors and companions Thomas W. Covington, he says, was foreman and John H. Martin, Thomas F. Martin, Wesley W. Whitaker and Junius B. Whitaker were apprentices, and Austin and Stephen, (colored,) were the pressmen. (In 1838 he chronicles the death of his foreman, Mr. Covington, "after a short illness.")

CONSPICUOUS AND WEALTHY CITIZENS. - The young chronicler gives the following list of the "conspicuous and wealthy citizens of Raleigh": "Judge Duncan Cameron, President of the Bank of the State, extremely wealthy; William Boylan, equally so; Judge Saunders, member of Congress; Gen. Ireddell, formerly Governor; Hon. J. H. Bryan, formerly in Congress; Wm. H. Hayward; Washington Hayward; Charles Masly; Weston B. Gales; Hugh McQueen; Henry W. Miller; J. R. J. Daniel; J. B. Shepard; Gen. Patterson, President of the Raleigh & Gaston Railroad; George W. Morehead, formerly President of the Raleigh & Gaston Railroad; Thomas Devaux, whose father, John Devaux is the wealthiest man in the State, his wife inheriting the Pollock estate which included nine hundred slaves and land bordering on the Roanoke river to the extent of twenty-five miles; Richard Smith, the wealthiest merchant in Raleigh. The Hayward family is among the oldest and most respectable in the city. The family of Col. Polk, deceased, is among the wealthiest of the city. (He continues the list.) Wm. F. Collins, Controller; William Hill, Secretary of State; Wm. and Joseph Pass, among the oldest, richest and most respectable citizens; Hinton Hunter, Treasurer of State; James Edwards, Sheriff of Wake county--the man and liked by everybody; Richard Finch, Superior Court Clerk; and James T. Maxwell, County Court Clerk--both clever men; Dr. Beckwith and Dr. Felt, Haywood, and physicians and clever gentlemen--and many hundred others who are in high standing in point of wealth, talents and respectability." He also names "the Judge of the Supreme Court who resided here during the session of the Court--WILLIAM GASTON, first man in the State, Chief Justice Ruffin and Judge Daniel."

Raleigh, he sets down (1858) with a population of 3,000. After a sketch of the style of the then city government, he proceeds: "Joseph Gales, Sen. deceased, was the first Mayor of Raleigh, afterwards Weston B. Gales, for several years. Joseph Gales held the office when he died; Weston B. Gales resigned, but can be elected any time he chooses."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

THE OLD ACADEMY BUILDING. - In his description of the city our young chronicler does not overlook the old Academy Building. He says: "The old Academy Building is in the Eastern part of the city. Several years since one of the most popular schools in the State was kept there; but it has gone down and with it the buildings, which are very much decayed. The first debating society I ever joined held its meetings in one of these old buildings." He mentions, also, "the second street running west from the Capitol, the Theatre, belonging to the Masonic Lodge, whose Hall is in one portion of the building, and which, with the old Academy Building, still stands."

ON SUBMISSION.

PRESENTED TO E. & G. GALESON BY THE DEATH OF LITTLE GEORGE BAKER.

Stricken, smitten and afflicted, Saviour to thy cross I cling; Thou hast every blow directed, Thou alone canst healing bring. Try me till no drops remaineth, And whatever the trial be While thy gentle arm sustaineth, Passive will I cling to thee. Cheerfully the stern rod blessing, I will just each murmuring cry, Every doubt and fear dismissing, Faithful in thine arms will lie. And when through deep seas of sorrow, I have gained the heavenly shore, Bliss from every vital I'll borrow, And for each evil let thee prove, S. - Hale Forest.