VOL. IX.

RALEIGH, N. C., TUESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1873.

NO. 69.

HOME AFFAIRS.

Cotton.
This great staple sold yesterday for 12 cents in the Raleigh market. The farmers would do well to heed our advice and hold their cotton for the present.

Wanted.
A young man from the country can obtain a good situation as clerk who can come well recommended, by addressing box 162, city post office.

Fast Four-in-Hand.
At the Dexter park, on Saturday, James Stinson drove four-in-hand in 2.40, the fastest time recorded.

Hickman Lodge-Election of Officers.
We are requested to announce that this evening is the regular time for the election of officers with Hickman Lodge of Good Templars of this city. Every member is urged to be present, promptly at 7 o'clock.

Weldon Fair.
The Weldon Fair opens to-day. The signs are that of the many successful Fairs of the Roanoke Society, this will be the most successful. A large number of the excellent articles of stock, etc., on exhibition at the State Fair will be there on exhibition in addition to the display the Roanoke country is able to contribute. We wish the Weldon Fair success.

Winston Items.
Nathaniel Davis, a mechanic of this place died of heart disease on Saturday Oct. 11th while on his way home to his father's residence about ten miles from Winston. He died in his wagon.

Dangerous Runaway.
A horse, with a wagon attached, ran from the rear of the store of Williamson, Upchurch & Thomas, on yesterday, and had a gay time till stopped by the wagon in its rear coming in contact with a tree. The gearing being good, the horse came not to grief, but flat of his back and was satisfied with the performance to that point. No harm done.

Reams' Cotton Cultivator.
An error in the premium list, as published by the Agricultural Society, left Reams' Cotton Cultivator out. Yet it obtained the second premium, and a gentleman who was present tells us that Watt the celebrated "plow man" stated in this city that if work was the test, Reams' Cultivator was the machine. The Society will correct its error in regard to Mr. Reams' Machine.

Handsome Present.
N. S. Harp, Esq., of this city, was the purchaser of the thoroughbred colt "Cad," mentioned in our last, and presented him to his son-in-law T. B. Yancey, of the firm of Wynne, Yancey & Co. Mr. Harp paid $600 for the colt. The New Jersey horseman who attempted to purchase "Cad" was satisfied he was in the making of a better horse than the one who beat "Piney Woods" at the Fair.

North Carolina Minerals.
The world is beginning to find out, but very slowly, that our State is very rich in minerals. An intelligent writer in the Weldon News says:

Our newspapers now frequently contain notices of some new mineral discovery. Not only gold but silver, copper, lead, iron, etc., in the greatest abundance, phosphorus, or MacLead, and is commonly called cerulean, diamonds, borax, or heavy spar, zinc, generally known as blende, manganese, limestone, quartz, amethyst, marble, &c., have been found. No doubt, future explorations will bring to light other important discoveries.

Sundry Services.
The writer attended upon the services of the Methodist church in the morning. The pastor, Rev. A. W. Mangum, delivered a very earnest and impressive discourse on the necessity and duty of prayer. Our gentlemen were received from the Goldsboro' church. The pastor informed the congregation that the church had recently contributed the following sum: For the relief of the sufferers at Shreveport $50, Memphis $50, and Orphan Home at Oxford, $75. This is well done—a noble charity.

At night we worshipped with the Presbyterian congregation. Rev. Mr. Atkinson preached one of the most animated, incisive and interesting sermons we have ever heard from him. His subject was the conviction of the sinner and was based upon Psalm 51. The singing, as usual, was uncommonly good. If this church had a less able minister the singing is sufficiently attractive to draw larger congregations than attend at night. As far as we know, the singing is better here than anywhere else in the State. But some will possibly say: "What do you know about it?"

Miller & Clifton having entered into copartnership, have fitted up the establishment known as Prairie's old stand, in excellent style for the Restaurant business. Fine elegant carpets, neatly papered rooms, and a large spacious Billiard Hall, Oct 13-14

Carriage Manufactory.
I have a fine lot of Buggies, Phaetons and Rockaways on hand, which parties would do well to examine before purchasing elsewhere. Place of business on Morgan street, next door to Wynne, Yancey & Co.'s Livery stable. N. S. HARP, Oct 26-30.

Appointments by Bishop Atkinson.
Sunday, Oct. 26th, Smithville.
Nov. 9th, Greensboro.
Tuesday, " 11th, Salem.
Thursday, " 13th, Reidsville.
Saturday, " 15th, Mountain Chapel, Rockingham Co.
Sunday, " 16th, Leaksville.

Granville Tobacco.
"The tobacco crop of Granville is not up to the average either in quantity or quality."
This item we have met with in several exchanges. The writer's home is in Granville, and according to the best information he has been able to obtain, whilst the crop is smaller than usual, in quality it is quite up to the average, and a great deal better than the last crop.

Good Sport.
Four middle-aged "sports" of this city went on a fishing excursion to Alford's (late Clements) mill pond in the South-Western corner of Wake county, on Friday last and returned on Saturday evening, having caught one hundred and fifty pounds of fish and shot a number of ducks; nor was the mill run off. We call this good sport. By the way, Alford's mill-pond is one of the prettiest sheets of water we ever saw, and an excellent water power. There are on it now a grist mill, a saw-mill and a cotton gin.

RALEIGH SOME FORTY YEARS AGO.

Extracts from a Boy's Journal.

In the last two issues of the SENTINEL we gave the Boy's impressions of the leading men of Raleigh, "some forty years ago," our people generally as he saw them; the South as it appeared to the New England youth, and slavery as it existed, compared with his home impressions of the institution. We will now follow his narrative somewhat closer.

THE OLD REGISTER OFFICE.
On the 1st of May, 1837, the youth first entered the Register office to learn the art of printing. The Register block of building, as he first saw them, he describes as follows:

"In the first house was a book store, the second a paper warehouse, the third was a book-binders, the fourth was a 'printing house' (at the time he wrote, a printing office) The type-setting of the SENTINEL is now done in the same brick building. All the buildings the boy first saw in the 'Register block' still stand with little or no alteration.

THE GALE'S FAMILY.
On becoming an apprentice, the youth also became a member of Mr. Weston R. Gale's family, "which consisted of himself, wife and three children, and shortly afterwards Mr. Joseph Gale was added, having returned from Washington City where he had resided a short time and where death had deprived him of his wife." He continues:

"I found Mrs. Gale a lady of great personal beauty, genteel, accomplished and refined. She was kind and generous to all around her, and was universally admired and respected.

"The children were pretty and intelligent and interesting, their merry laugh ringing throughout the hall. Health, happiness and enjoyment reigned within the family circle and everything seemed crowned with bliss.

"Mr. Gale was a gentleman of fine intellect, sound judgment, and was noted for his generosity and unbounded benevolence. He was a man of the most kindly feelings, of mild disposition, and had the rare faculty of being able to suit himself to any kind of company. He was dignified, without austerity, and commanded reverence and respect. The apt and honorable skill with which he supported the principles of the noble Whig cause made him one of the most popular of men of that party. By all men he is regarded as a talented, good, virtuous, christian gentleman. He is the life and soul of the social and domestic circle and a soul-stirring orator. To point out a man as an example of goodness, kindness, honesty and purity of intention, I would unhesitatingly point to Walter R. Gale.

In 1838 our young historian chronicles the organization of the "Raleigh Guards," the completion of the new courthouse, and very exciting times in the county election in which "Mr. Gale was beaten for the Legislature—the county being locofoco."

THE CAPTAIN AND HIS BROTHER.
Nothing of interest, he says, occurred till 1840. "In this year the capital was finished and the Raleigh & Gaston Railroad completed. A large dinner was given at the depot, and thousands were seated around the festive board. Flags were displayed upon the buildings, the cannon roared and the assembled masses made the welkin ring.

For two nights in succession the capital was illuminated. In the Senate Chamber, moving in the many dances were Caroline's fair daughters and large numbers from Old Virginia. A table was set the entire length of the building, groaning beneath the most luxurious viands that the State could afford. From Virginia and all parts of the Old North State the people came in large numbers, and for three days they revelled in enjoyment."

The next event recorded is the "Big Whig Convention" of 1840, a sketch of which we reserve for our next.

ANDREW JOHNSON.
The ex-President recently made a speech in Washington an abstract of which appears in the New York Tribune. We give some of the more important and suggestive remarks in the constitution and the dangers which threaten the country. It condenses our own views as set forth a few days ago in the Sentinel.

"What kind of a government have we now? [Applause and cries of 'Tell us!'] We need to have some idea that there was a constitutional government, as I argued when I first made my appearance as a member of Congress. The inquiry I formerly saw as to the powers conferred upon the government. It was thought long ago that there was a limitation to power both as to the several States and general government under that instrument. Such was the view of Washington, the Father of his Country, who was 'first in peace and first in war,' and who sacrificed his own ease and comfort to pay for his services, and so thought Jefferson and those great men who framed the constitution. When he first came to Congress, Mr. Johnson said, there were two great parties—the Whig and the Democrat. He wished to do the country as under their control. He feared the people would never again have two such parties. The difference between them was merely this: The Democrats contended for strict construction while the Whigs claimed a little more latitude. While their parties were thus opposed they both agreed in the essential principles
