THE SENTINEL.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JAN. 8, 1874.

JOSIAH TURNER, Editor.
T. R. KINGSBURY, Associate Editor.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The SENTINEL issues more papers every week than any other paper in Raleigh. If any one doubts this positive statement, we refer him to the manager of the News Paper Mill who supplies the city press with all the paper they consume.

The SENTINEL circulates in every county in North Carolina, and goes into more than twenty States.

It is therefore the best ADVERTISING MEDIUM in Raleigh.

We advertise at as moderate rates as any other paper. TRY US.

TO OUR PATRONS.

This week's issue of the SENTINEL is the largest paper ever published in this State. There is money enough now due on our books to make us rich if it could be collected. There are many who have never paid us a dollar since they subscribed to the paper five years ago, although they are men of means. Many of the subscribers have been dropped, but this course on our part to which, we were driven, neither induced them to renew nor to pay their indebtedness. A fierce war has been waged upon us by railroad presidents with ring money, who furnished free passes for editors, their agents and drummers, to canvass the State for their ring organs. The emissaries and agents for those organs have even endeavored to rob us of our legitimate advertising, and more than one person have been stopped on their way to our office to advertise stray mules, by the friends of the ring papers.

We give notice to all subscribers in arrears that we shall be compelled to cut them off. We can not afford longer to continue papers that are not paid for. We need the assistance of every subscriber to aid us in our fight against rings and corruptionists. Every subscriber should pay up promptly, and those whose papers are discontinued should renew at once. We have striven to do our duty by the people, let them do their duty by us. It is not that we are avaricious that we adopt the course indicated, but it is because we need and must have money to carry on the good fight against the enemies of the people.

EDITORIAL ENTERIES.

Twenty-five railroads, it is known, defaulted in the payment of interest due January 1st.

Bishop Cummins states that the prospects of the New Church are good, and that it is gaining ground daily.

Beecher's Church (Plymouth) has informed sister Congregational Churches that it governs itself and is independent of all others, as each family is.

The Dean of Canterbury, (England) who participated in the joint communion at Dr. Adam's Presbyterian Church in New York during the meeting of the Evangelical Alliance, made an address a few days ago in which he defended his course. Among other utterances was his statement that "an established Church is not altogether a gain," a sentiment which was loudly applauded. He violated no canon of the Episcopal Church of America.

It has been revealed that three million political documents that were sent out from Washington to influence the election in favor of Grant, were paid for out of the U. S. Treasury. It is further stated, and it is the most serious part of the business, that the documents were circulated in the mails illegally, and that the so-called franks on them were forgeries. A shameless and most villainously corrupt administration, that of Grant's!

Here is a delightful record for a United States Senator:

Pinchback, who is about to take his seat as a member of the United States Senate from Louisiana, was, at the time of Gen. Butler's reign in that State, found guilty of larceny in one of Gen. Butler's courts, and sent to the penitentiary for two years.—Springfield Republican.

To think of such a scoundrel having a seat among gentlemen, or of decorating with his presence the hall made famous by the eloquence and virtues of the illustrious men of the past! "An ounce of civet, good apothecary!"

The Empress Josephine was born in Martinique. Her parents were Captain Gaspard de la Pagerie and Rose de Sanois—both descended from families of highest distinction in France. Her elder sister was to have married Viscount Alexandre de Beauharnais, but died. Josephine was then given to him, though objecting to such an arrangement. She afterwards married Napoleon Bonaparte and was divorced. She was a beautiful woman. The late Emperor, Louis Napoleon, sent a beautiful statue of the Empress as a present to the people of Martinique island, (one of the West India groups,) and it now stands at Fort de France, the capital. Another beautiful lady of the island, Aimee de Rivery, became the Sultana of Selim III., sovereign of the Turkish Empire. That native from the same island to share the thrones of two kingdoms, is something remarkable, and hence we chronicle it.

Christ Church (Episcopal) of Boston was erected in 1793. It was from the tower of this Church that Paul Revere signalled by hanging out lights, the march of the British troops to Concord. Among the relics which are carefully preserved, are the old Bible and Prayer-books, and those were used in the service last Sunday. There is also the silver communion service presented by that lovely old Christian, George the Second. It has a chime of eight bells, hung in 1744—the first full chime in America, and cast in Gloucester.

The house of the great Rothschilds is not over a century old. About one hundred years ago the founder was a small money changer of Frankfort. His real name was Bauer. His sign was a red shield (Rothschild)—hence the name was assumed, and henceforth the family of Bauer was known as Rothschild. The first eminent one among them was Mayer Anselm, who became the banker of Wilhelm, Landgrave of Hesse-Cassel. The latter was playing chess with Baron Estorff, and was about to be beaten. Turning to the Jew, who was standing behind the Baron's chair, William asked: "Do you understand chess?" "Sufficiently well," was the reply, "your serene highness, to induce me, were the game mine, to castle on the king's side." This stroke made his fortune. The original Rothschild died in 1812. He had five sons, all dead, who became eminent bankers, viz Anselm, Solomon, Nathan, Charles and James. Of these, Nathan was the greatest, and he did business in London. His son, Lionel, is now the head of the London house. James left three sons, all living, and all bankers, viz: Alphonse, Gustave and Solomon. Mayer Charles is the present head of the Frankfort house. There are others, among them Adolphe, who owns a most beautiful villa on Lake Leman.

SEWARD RESPONSIBLE FOR THE WAR.

Our readers are perhaps aware that Hon. Jeremiah Black is one of the foremost lawyers in our land. He is, we take him, as just and patriotic as he is able and learned. It will be also remembered that Hon. Charles Francis Adams was pleased sometime ago to pronounce an elaborate eulogy on the late William H. Seward. This eulogy has been severely criticized in the public prints and by men who have held high stations. Notably among them is Hon. Gideon Wells, who has done the country real service in his exposures of Mr. Adams' false statements, and in removing the veneering that the Massachusetts statesman had laid on the character of the dead Secretary so thickly. In the January number of the Galaxy, an article from Judge Black will appear in review of the Adams eulogy. In the meantime the New York World having procured the advanced sheets publishes it in full. It is remarkably healthy reading for the times. We copy for the benefit of our readers the concluding passages. It will be seen that Judge Black establishes most conclusively that the cunning, oily, tyrannical, wicked Secretary of State was responsible for the war that raged so fiercely for four years. It will be seen that Mr. William H. Seward, could have dissipated the lowering clouds so heavily charged with death and destruction. But he was bent on carrying out his infamous and devilish doctrine of the "Higher Law," although it devastated the land and sowed the dragon's teeth of ruin and discord. But here is what Judge Black has to say, and it is worthy of an attentive reading:

Since you and Mr. Welles and Mr. Blair have put on record your personal reminiscences of Seward, I will add my contribution, believing that the fact I am about to mention throws a broader light on his public character than any which you have given. When the troubles were at their worst, certain Southern gentlemen, through Judge Campbell, of the Supreme Court, requested me to meet Mr. Seward and see if he would not give them some ground on which they could stand with safety inside of the Union. I cannot, within these limits, set forth even the substance of it. He seemed conscious of his power and willing to use it in the interest of peace and union, so far as he could without the risk of offending his own party. What could he do? Many propositions were discussed, and rejected as being either impracticable or likely to prove useless, before I told him what I felt perfectly sure would stop all controversy at once and forever. I proposed that he should simply pledge himself and the incoming Administration to govern according to the Constitution, and upon every point of constitutional law to accept that exposition of it which had been or might be given by the Judicial authorities. He started at this, became excited, and violently declared he would do no such thing. "That," said he, "is treason; that would make me agree to the Dred Scott case." In vain I told him that he was not required to admit the correctness of any particular case, but merely to submit to it as the decision of the highest tribunal, from which there could be no appeal except to the sword.

You will see that if such a pledge as this had been given and kept, the war could not have taken place; it would have left nothing to fight about; and the decent men of the Anti-Slavery party would have lost nothing by it which they pretended to want, for even the Dred Scott case had inured to their practical benefit. But Mr. Seward must have given up the higher law and denied himself the pleasure of kidnapping Democrats.

I had never before heard that treason was obedience to the Constitution as construed by the Courts; but this prepared me to learn, as I did some time afterward, that the correlative virtue of loyalty consisted in trampling the laws under foot. What should the world think of the statesmanship which introduced these notions?

I do not know, but I believe that Mr. Seward, in consequence of the conversation above mentioned, got Mr. Lincoln to commit himself in the inaugural to the absurd and mischievous declaration that he would not take this law from the Supreme Court, but would take it from the Chicago Convention. Your address has undoubtedly done much to diminish what little confidence was left in the Government as a protection to our personal rights. We cannot help but feel that the security of life, liberty and property must be fearfully slender in a country where a citizen of your standing can openly say that the owner and tinker of the little bell was a statesman whose example ought to be universally copied.

You are a leader of the party calling itself "Liberal Republican," whose platform is a protest against iniquity in high places, and whose movements are a struggle for the restoration of honest government. Your compatriots know, if you do not, that the evils they deplore were introduced by the man you advise them to imitate. The party you oppose for its hideous corruption, has but fashioned its moral and political principles upon the model which you now declare to be full of beauty and goodness. Your personal consistency is nothing; but to go back in this way, not only on yourself, but on your friends and your country, is too bad.

DON'T TAKE.

It is said the consolidation bill lately passed by the legislature does not go into effect until the first day of January, 1875. If this be true the bill is distasteful. If the legislature had adjourned sine die, instead of taking a recess, the bill would have been acceptable and the work commenced. Buford, the Stock-watering President, is greatly disgruntled because the bill did not allow a change of guage as he wished it. Billy Smith said the bill was not worth a d—n. We suppose Billy's objection was, that, the President was not elected for five years, and he and his board were not allowed to sell the mortgage bonds. The honest advocates of consolidation must not misunderstand us as did Col. Humphrey. We have no idea of assailing gentlemen of integrity who advocate this measure, we have no personal end to serve in opposing and denouncing the sharks and sharpers we know to be at work for their own personal ends and aims.

Mr. Wilson, the President of the Southern Security Company, is said to be opposed to the bill. When the Legislature meets, Col. Bennett and his friends must be ready to protect the State's interest in the North Carolina Railroad against Buford, Billy Smith and the sharpers.
