There will be no difficulty in electing for the Legislature, unless they can en tice some democrats out as independent pendent candidates,

REMINISCENCES OF GENERAL WIG FALL.

A correspondent of the St. Louis Dispatch gives some interesting stories of the late Senator Wigfall :

"I read with some interest your article on the death of General Lowis T. Wigfall, of Texas, a man who, to my mind, was one of the most remarkable characters the South ever produced, and I have thought some reminiscences of him strung together at random might not by unacceptable at this time, especially as his death has brought his name once more preminently before the public.

In conversation he was one of the most facinating men it was ever my fortune to be thrown into contact with-not only a brilliant talker, but a learned and profound talker as well. Possessed of a wonderfully retentive memory, a great fund of anecdete, a style that was exceedingly picturesque, and a gift in making metaphors-for it cannot be called by any other name—that was inexhaustible, he could in an hour's talk as it was said Lord Mocaulay could. Before as audience of the people proper he was irresistible. Once after the war, and in the mountains o Colorado, General Wigfall happened to be passing through some little mining town in the silver-regions. I think it was in 1870. It was raining hard and had been all day. The vehicle in which he had taken passage broke down a short distance from the place, and this necessitated a halt for the night. Roughly clad, covered with wud and wet to the skin, Wigfall struggled up to the nearest hotel in the settlement and registered his name While drying his soaked garments at the stove, a shout was raised outside, and the news came that a well-known character of the place, a desperado called Texas Peter. had been caught with a sack of gold dust in his possession that did not belong to him, and that the miners had formed themselves into a court of justice to try him for his life.

"Where is the man from f" Wigiall saked of the landlord. "They say he is from Texas, but I don't know. He has a bad name hereabouts and I expect it will go hard with him." Wigfall himself was from Texas, and perhaps some memory of the State, at the time, was busy at his heart and earnestly at work upon his sympathies. This soliri quet of Texas Poter, in all probability borrewed one, arrested his attention at once. He rose abruptly from his seat, went out among the miners, gathered together in the rain to pass sentence upon a fellow mortal, who in their eyes had committed the uppardonable sin. The culprit had no friends. He was a gaunt man with a scar acress the right check, iron gray hair, and a face that was strongly marked, yet siniater. His guilt was established beyond doubt, and with all due formality he was sentenced to death. The role was brought, and from purple hue the man's face turned ashen pale.

Wigfall leaned over near to him and saked him gently if there was any one in Texas who would be sorry to hear that he had died like a dog. Yes, there was one; a wife whom he had once been happy with, but who, for all that, had been cruelly treated and abandoned,

"Will you go back to her and suppor her if I save you !" Wigfall demanded. The man swore he would.

Then in a twenty militres speech, as ha een declared to the writer by three truthful men who were present, Wigfali did with that rough, unshorn crowd just what he pleased. They cried, laughed, len sorrow and rage and infinite pity by turns, and finally with a great yell release ed the thief and bade him go in peace while the spell was on them.

Before he left the town he drew up a code of laws for the mines, susended their local self-government, had refus the profits of a hundred claims if he would stay among them and keep the peace, and declined to take, with much gentleness and many kind words, no end presents as an homage to his el-quence and the interest he had shown in the welfor of the settlement,

The Republicans, we foothills in some parts of the northern hear, de not proposa to run candidates pertion of this State, notably in Placer county, are covered with a hardy, wild shrub, which upon investigation, turns out candidates. Orange will have no inde. to be a coffee plant. Those familiar with the genuine cultivated coffee abrub grown n South America and the West Indies pronounce this unquestionably a plant of the same species, of course inferior, since it has been neglected and grown only in a wild state, but presumably susceptible of development to such a degree of perfection as to constitute its product a valuable article of commerce. It is, at least, well worth the trouble of experiment to demonstrate the possibility of such a result. Even should this wild coffee bush resist the kindly influences of cultivation and refuse to yield good berries, it may still prove of service in suggesting the experiment of introducing the cultivation of the real coffee. So far as we are informed no attempt has been rande to test the suitability of our soil and climate for this crop, and it is too important a mat-ter for the suggestion to be permitted to pass unheeded. GENERAL BEALES was presented to the New York. The etiquette of the British Court has relaxed. Fermerly no improper characters were allowed to enter the presence of her Majesty. Or did this only apply to women? If so, it is one of hose poor rules which will not work both ways.

Hon, A. M. WADDELL, the talented Representative from the Wilmington (N. C.)district, was unanimously renominated resterday by the Conservative convention held at Magnolia, N. C. Colonel Wad tiell is justly regarded as among the ablest of the Southern delegation, and the compliment paid him yesterday by his constituents in his absence and while an invalid, shows that his services in the last and present Congress are appreciated. At the same time we camestly hope that some straightforward Lepublican may be elected to fill his piece.
