A mejority of the excursionists marched up on foot, giving our streets a cheerful and lively aspect, white others in carriages and brass band were driven to the capitol park. The crowd, after assembling at grounds, separated into groups, and visit-ed different points of interest in the city, seeming to cujoy themselves very much.

They were accompanied by several of our city ladies Arriving there they found some three hundred persons, many of whom were ladies, assembled. Eloquent speeches Carter and T. C. Fuller, when dinner announced, Mr. Adams having with a lavish hand provided most bountifully for his guests. The barbecue was preounced most excellent and the feast was greatly enjoyed. After the splendid repast Hon. A. S. Merrimon and Mr. F. H. Busbee addressed the audience. At the onclusion of the latter gentleman's renarks the day was converted into pleasure, the lovers of the "light fantastic" repairing to a platform erented for the ocasion, and to the strains of the sweet nusic were driving dull care away in the morry maz s of the dance, which was beog participated in with great glee when our informant took bis departure. The The occasion was one of the most pleasant nature, and our only regret to that duty forbid our being with them. We are asstred that Mr. Adams' hospitality will not on be forgotten by those who were so ortunate as to be present.

THE ROSS CHILD ANDUCTION.-This abduction case in Philadelphia still reates immense sensation, and as yet lectives of the country. But little or no clue has been obtained not withstanding the $20,000 reward offered by the Mayor of that city.

This case brings to mind the stealing of little boy, the sen of Mr. Cherry, a poor man near Washington, N. C., about five years ago, The father was absent one day from the house some hundred yards engaged in killing hogs, and the mother was also a short distance away sagaged n domestic matters. Upon the return of the parents to their dwelling it was dissovered that their only darling was missing. Forthwith search was instituted and the houses of neighbors were visited and even the woode and swamps were coured without avail for days. They heard that a tobacco wagouer peaced through Greenville with a little boy and afterwards that the man had gone through afterwards that the man had gone through Oxford, there purchasing a blanket to protect the little one from the cold blasts of winter. The parents were poor and no hus nor cry was made over the affair as in the Philadelphia case, but the little one was sadly given up by his loving parents as forever gone to them. Dr. George Blacknail, now of the Yarborough House, hearing of the sad case had a thousand circulars struck and distributed House, hearing of the sad case had a thousand circulars struck and distributed offering a reward for the lest babe, but the only word that ever came to his ears was that the wagoner and his stolen boy had been seen on the bighway in For-sythe county. That was the last tidings. The father of the child died a few years The father of the child died a lew years ago lamenting his loss, and a sorrowing mother to this day mourns for her first born. Perhaps if our people would use similar exertions as are being made in Philadelphia, that widow's heart might yet be made to rejoice and her home bloom as in days gone by.

Mr. Wray could not afford to lose at opportunity so fortuitous but promptly blishes a card which is profusely circulated throughout the county, in which he raises the old cry of persecution, and evidently tries to excite the sympathics of the people in his behalf.

He withdraws from the canvass under the pretence that it would not be safe for him to continue it longer.

The people will not accept this as sufficient excuse, as Mr. Wray is abundantly able to take care of himself if we may judge from appearances.

A BEAR KILLED. - The alarm of "beat" in the woods" had been sounded in the Pleasant Hill neighborhood for weeks and seeks, but every effort to kill it proved ineffectual, until one night last week the monster visited the very door of Blount Hines, col. Hearing the noise under the window, said Hines silently arose from his bed, whispered to his son and prepared for the conflict. Father and son were soon armed with poles and the son, being the braver of the two, opened the battle. His blows descended on "bruin's head so thick and so fast that in less time than it takes us to write this, he exclaimed : " Father I have killed him !" Just then the old man emptied a volley of shot into the head of the dying animal which tumbled over without a grean. The women and children ventured out congratulations were exchanged, lights were brought and behold, there lay the crashed through a window and sank to cold corpus of a fine colt which had been the floor in repose. Down came his wife, fooled since the family had retired to half way down stairs. "Mr. Swehcins, dream of bears and of danger. It e pegro im hearty cheers, he made an able and ele-quent speech, expaning the corruptions of and dealt Mr. Moreslemder a severe blow on the head, inflicting as ugly wound. A negro, Austin Gaskins, then drew his pistol and fired at the whites, the ball taking effect in the side and entering the intestines of Mr. Marshal Kerman, a one armed ex-Confederate soldier; his wound is thought to be fatal. The next shot the negro lost his life was entirely of a was made by H. E. Stilley, who took aim at Capt. Thompson, the Democratic candidate for the Legislature, who was standing quietly some distance off. Capt. Thompson saw Stilley deliberately pointing his weapon, saw the flash, and felt the ball when it struck him on the head Stilley denied having fired at all, until made to produce his pistol, when three chambers were found empty. The shooting was pretty rapid for some two or three minutes, fifteen or twenty shots having been fired, mostly by the negroes, who were nearly all armed, whilst but few wespons were in the hands of the whites; Mr. Thomas Carowon, standing on the outside of the crowd, was selected for a target, and three bullets whistled past his assallanta while being pursued, and fortunately escaped unburt. One negro was seen to alm and cooly discharge his pistol at the crowd, and was arrested be fore he could escape. The mill was soot cleared, many of the blacks seeking the cover of the swamps and such other places of concesiment as they could find Some three or four were wounded, but none dangerously. Austin Gaskins and the assailant of Mr. Moreslender have been lodged in jail, and Stilley is under a bond for his appearance. We would also state here that Mr. Carowon, Mr. Wm. Adams, and Mr. Ed. Winfield are also under a bond for their appearance. The attempt upon the life of Capt, Thompson deserves exemplary punishment; it was cowardly assault upon an unoffending and an unprepared man, and the crime merits, and should receive, the heaviest penaltics of the law. Mr. Moreslender's assailant declares, since his arrest, openly, that his purpose was to kill, and that he would do Night before last Mr. Swelkins stayed down town very late, being greatly interested in a game of draw poker and trimmings. When he got home he was so deeply affected by the trimmings and the memory of his last hand, which somebody had played waxed cards on him that instead of unlocking the door he she cried, "are you hurt ? Did you call ? "Call nothin"," he responsively murmured. "Call ! I raise you twenty chips ! "You call 'I you want to- hie !"

He was interupted in those statements by some two or three gentle men, among them Mr. Bogart, Local of the Ech, using language to that gentle man that he would not dared to have uttered had he not supposed himself guarded by his negro allies and friends. Mr. Bogart promptly charged him with being an 'infanous list," at the same time advancing towards Ruspess. Respess took so exception to the language of Mr. Bogart, but seemingly regarded the mat-ter as a jest. There was no earthly danty, and thematter would have died there but for an advance made by the negroe towards the place occupied by Mr. Bo gart, which was a signal for a similar movement on the part of the whites.
