On the following day he came to this city, and put himself under the treatment of Dr. Geo. W. Graham. After a careful diagnosis, Dr. G. gave his pro-fessional opinion to the effect that he was surable, and at once commenced a course of treatment. Two months elapsed with out the slightest change in his condition, only a gradual disappearance of the tubercules in the throat, that Dr. G. dis covered on his first examination, and which he believed, if removed, would restore the voice. He succeed treatment and Tuesday last Mr. Reams roice returned. Dr. Graham is a son o ex-Gov, Graham, and bids fair to take a prominent rank among the medical fracially in the treatment of the eye, ear, &c.

LACE WEATHER ANGMALTES AND PROG NOTICS OF THE COMING WINTER -The eccentric weather through which the country has been passing for some mouths constitutes a memorable meteorologic cycle, of which we have not seen the end. Since the early part of July nearly every section has been visited by ther mal extremes and excessive droughts which have lingered into the present month and bid fair to leave their impress on the approaching winter. That the great continents undergo cyclical change of climate by no means inapproctable is matter of his orio record too familiar, to be ignored. Is modern time, as in 1857 and 1858 these non-periodic vicinsuades have been very sens bly felt. In the years just named the rainless season was a mothed in Central Europe that the Semegia Party, shrunk to a mere shadow of its usual self, and partions of the bed of the Rhine, never before diled up, were left uncovered, "Strange to say, simultaneously however, the level of Lake Ontario was two feet higher than its mean level as determined by fourteen years' ob servations. In the few years preceding 1840 the rainfall was no large in Pennsylvania that an American geologist showed that, had the same extended to the lake region, the inland waters, in the absence of new outlets, would have risen twenty-mer and autumn of 1874 on this continen has had its compensation apparently in the abuormal rainfall of an opposite continent in the same hemisphere. While the Ohio and Mississippi have been slug gishly coursing their half emptied channels the Nile has been pouring its torrential roaring floods over the inundated plains of Egypt as it has hardly been known to do from time immemorial. Early in July last the great African river began to rise rapidly (at the very time our American rivers began to fall) and continued to do so until it reached, on the 11th of Reptember, the almost unprece dented beight of twenty nine feet at Al the 7th of October, when an increase of Egypt under the rushing, yellow tide Still farther east the heavy rains in India, the autumnal cyclones in the Bay of Bengal and the terrible typhoons which swept over Nagaski and Hong Kong evidence conditions of excessive launtity on the

Such physical changes appear anoma lous enough, especially when we contrast those which caused the Bengal famine in 1873 and the floods in 1874. Are they supra-annual periods? So it would seem; and it also seems likely that these extraordinary phenomena travel slowly around the globe, somewhat as the ordinary storm does. The attempt has been made to trace hot and cold years to the variations of sun-spot frequency, and eminant scientists have contended that the sun spot periods are followed by currespording climatic changes on the earth. But, however this may be, the abnormal seasons we have experienced are directly traceable to the variations of atmospheric pressure on the earth. Thus, according to known laws of the atmosphere, the abnormal prevalence of hot southerly winds on any continet north of the Equator proves that there has been an aerial depression of long standing in the ocean west of it; and a similar excess of cold northerly winds argues an excess of pressure If these long standing high and low pressures move from west to east, in the middle latitudes, as the transient and anti-cyclones are known to do. we have an essy and abvious explanation of the contrasts of weather on opposing sides of the Northern Hemisphere in the

Without dwelling on the theoretics ! aspects of these weather anomalies it is great deficiency of maisture in the soil of the United States east of the Rocky Mountains. The winter and spring rains pare the ground for agriculture. But in the meantime the water courses must be scantils filled, the wells low and the sub-condition of a thoronghly drained field. The effect of such dryness, however, will be to check the chilling evaporation of the soil, an i thus, in some measure, to mitigate the rigors of the approaching winter - N. Y. Herald.
