SUNDAY IN RALEIGH.—A very cold day, cloudy enough but too cold to snow, though struggling flakes did fall in the morning. Full congregations at all the churches turned out in the morning.

METHODIST.

The Rev. Dr. Rosser of Virginia preached in the morning at the Edenton street Methodist church. His text was from the 8th chapter of Nehemia, the latter clause of 10th verse, "For the joy of the Lord is your strength." Dr. Rosser is of singular and impressive build for the pulpit, being slender as a willow yet as straight as an Indian, even we should judge near his 70th year, his silken gray beard flowing from his chin, and a full shock of hair mingled with brown and gray and white combed straight back over his massive head and touching his shoulders behind. He preaches without notes, and he gets about a pulpit with a grace of step and gesture that so plainly attest the inward promptings of the spiritual in the man. He said that the joy of the Lord supported us in the practice of the christian graces of self denial, resignation, patience, and humility. Self—and he stood silent with his fingers to his breast)—is the subject worked on by God, and the struggle begins between pardoned self and the temptations of the world. If self denial requires the loss of my right arm, (laying his arm on the pulpit) then I give it, the blood flows, it suffers ghastly amputation, and I am handless. And have I no joy to strengthen me in that suffering? If I have not, then the next time when the right eye is demanded I will not give it, I will practice no more self denial.

JOY IN PREACHING.

O the preaching of these times! I do not believe that one half of the ministers of the present day will ever get to heaven. They preach from a cold sense of duty. The preacher should feel a joy in preaching and preach so clearly as to feel the force of it himself, retrospective as it were. And there should also be a joy in hearing. When there is no joy the hearer feels that he knows more than the preacher, gets tired and is glad when sermon is over, and this decorous hour once a week at 11 o'clock on Sundays is a pretty good standard of their piety and of the measure of joy in their religion. There should be spiritual joy in singing, the songs of the affections should blend with the songs of the lips and the voice of praise on earth should attune with the heart-toned harps in the heaven. He thought of that lingering mother whose little babe in dimpled beauty and waxened loveliness had preceded her to heaven, he could fancy the little one, as she softly fingered the strings of that harp in the skies, leaning over, and the tones of the harp would whisper to the child like the voice of the mother herself, the mother on earth, but looking up, and her heart with the child and the harp.

JOY IN CONVERSATION.

There should also be joy in the conversation of a christian, not seal their lips up like they were dead and in a coma, but when William gets religion let him go to John, his old playmate and press him to go with him to God, and if John reads sincerity and joy in William's face he is very apt to follow him. He knew a lady at Winchester, Va., who was converted during a blinding, furious snow storm and through its wintery winds she rode several miles to tell a neighbor about it. That woman had something to talk about.

"GO UP, THOMAS."

He should never forget the scene he witnessed two years ago at the Wesley Camp Ground near Baltimore. An emaciated physician came up and knelt at the altar, nothing but a rude bench, and he went down and stood by his side. Suddenly the physician lifted his bowed down head and exclaimed, "I see the blood of the Son of God in the Heaven" and he asked me would I go with him to his son, I told him I would, and through the crowd we pushed our way, when we stood before a grown young man with his arms folded, who regarded his father in surprise. "Come with me, Thomas, and find the Savior as I have found him," cried the father, on the one side, the tears coursing down his cheeks, while I touched him on the other side and said to him "Go up, Thomas," and the young man regarding us both in silence, in an instant, as if from desperate resolution, broke his way through that crowd and knelt at the mercy seat, and the next day he was converted. I have since received a letter from him thanking me for my concern for his soul.

A large congregation heard Dr. Rosser and they seemed much affected at the close of his sermon. He will preach at the Methodist church during the nights of the coming week.

BAPTIST.

At the Baptist church this morning Rev. Dr. Pritchard preached an able sermon on the subject of

BACKSLIDING

"Those were wicked times and justly were they; and they backsliding shall reprove thee." &c., Jer. 2, 19. The preacher said: This chapter contains the first words in the prophet Jeremiah. He was a young man at a tender and peculiar period in the history of Israel. Jeremiah was a prophet of Macon and Jackson without paying toll. Referred.

It is now generally admitted by honest physicians, that when once the consumption is fairly fastened upon the lungs, no human power can save the patient from death. They also say that about fifty per cent. of those who die from this disease can trace the cause to a neglected cough or cold, which might have been cured by a small bottle of Liquid Opodeldoc, or what is the same thing, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

SENATE. February 5

President Armfield in chair.

Prayer by Rev. Mr. Atkinson.

Clerk read Journal of Saturday.

There was changing of votes taking to vote, and amendments asked to be allowed to spread on the journal in regard to the usury bill passed last Saturday, and the hall was right lively with a skirmish of debate between the usury bill men and the opposition. During this skirmish Mr. Linney congratulated Mr. French that he had stood out against this bill, although like a man, and had given no uncertain sound, that he had not fought the bill on this floor and then voted for it on its final reading.

Mr. Busbee offered a protest against the passage of the bill, stating that the majority had made a gag of the previous questions and in preventing the amendment as concerns the National banks, the bill was directly in the interest of those banks. The protest was signed by Senators Busbee, Westing, Graham, Stickney, Jenkins, Anderson, Irwin, Waddell, Kerr, Bell and French.

Mr. Shaw objected that the protest was not respectful to this Senate.

Mr. Parish objected because the protest was more the argument and peculiar views of Mr. Busbee than a protest.

The chair decided the protest was premature under a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill had passed.

BILLS, &C.

Mr. McMillan, instructions from the citizens of Ashe county to call a Convention. Referred.

Mr. Cantwell, bill for the government of city of Wilmington. Constitutional reform.

Mr. Shaw, bill allowing commissioners of Currituck to levy a special tax. Referred.

Mr. Graham, rules suspended and bill to incorporate State Grange passed third reading.

PRESIDENT ARMFIELD

took the floor, Mr. Morehead in the chair, and spoke to the motion to reconsider the passage of the usury bill. He thought the Senate had consumed time enough in this debate. He might claim the paternity of resorting to the people the old usury laws, as he had always been of opinion we would have no more prosperity in North Carolina until hands were laid on the moneyed monopolies, and they were told, "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther." The great argument of the opposition was to take off all restraints, and then free money would be cheap money. Such argument had already tended to repeal the usury laws, and they were made a mockery and delusion on our statute books. But where was the prosperity? Political economists advocate free money, but theory is one thing and practice another. Money had now gone up to 26 per cent., and no agricultural man or manufacturer could use it. It had become the tool of a gambler. The man who would borrow money at such ruinous rates to invest it in agricultural or manufacturing interests should be sent to the lunatic asylum. As to the question of law" concerning National Banks, it was no reason we should yield to common sense and the demands of the people because the lawyers had "posted a question." He was satisfied so far as the law was concerned. The bill was not too severe. If it was not severe we would put a premium in the poor man's purse and then break him in his heart. He was opposed to reconsidering. He believed it a plan of the opposition to defeat the bill. The people have their eyes on us, and the man who votes to reconsider and thus struggle this bill, must step before that people and tell them, "I did it." The people had come before him with pale lips and said unto him, "Go down yonder and pass that usury law and save us from destruction."

The motion to reconsider was tabled by one vote, and the passage of the bill was clinched.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Monday, Feb. 8.

At 11 a. m. Mr. Speaker Robinson called the House to order.

Prayer by Rev. Mr. Atkinson, of the city.

Messrs. Gudger, Reid and Shackelford submitted reports from standing committees.

Mr. Glenn, (republican,) a resolution calling upon all the white men in North Carolina to leave the ranks of the Republican party on account of the passage of the Civil Rights Bill.

Mr. Glenn gave his reasons for the introduction of the resolutions. He could not longer act in concert with the party fastening such odious and unjust measures upon the white men of the South.

Mr. Foote, (republican,) from Wilkes county, endorsed the remarks of Mr. Glenn, and declared he had forever washed his hands clean of the party pursuing the abominable measure.

By Mr. Burchhardt, of Caldwell, to amend chapter 18, Battle's Revisal. Referred.

By Mr. Proctt, a bill to prohibit the sale of liquor within two miles of Bald Creek school house, Yancey county. Referred.

By Mr. Bryson, a bill to allow the citizens of Swain county to pass through the
