A lady well known in Paris society lately cured her husband from stopping away from home at night. She wrote him an anonymous letter to this effect: "Coward! We have heard what you said of the Commune and the Republicans. We will not be insulted by such a fellow as you. And though we are at work till night, be sure that when we meet you we will be avenged. Long live the Republic.—A Workman." The husband took no notice of the letter to his wife, but he is careful not to go out at night now, but remains at home, much to his wife's delight, who rejoices at the success of her stratagem.

SUNDAY IN RALEIGH.—It is night, the churches all over, and the different congregations have taken the bed time train to get off at the same old station to-morrow. We sit like one asleep and fancy is busy with the faces of the dead and gone. There comes one, comes unbid, some muffled herald whispers the name to the heart, and we see the face as plain as it looked twenty years ago the time the schoolboy died. Here's another, poor fellow, wine and pleasure were his sin, and he has gone carrying his own sin, and knowing enough to make him a bad witness against many that outlive him. But here comes an angel's face, the face of a woman, she who followed up a mere youth with the whisperings of heaven, when no man cared for his soul, and the face wears the same smile it did two weeks before death when she shook the last farewell, knowing she was going, and ready to go. What means this review of the dead, or is it not the dead reviewing the living? Night is the time and they come when least expected, you lie thinking over the business of the day, when, by all that's strange, here comes ringing in the ear the name of a man you haven't thought of in six months and has been dead twenty years. What's that? Maybe it's because the mind with the body is sleepy, and sleep is called the twin sister of death, and the nearer we get to sleep the nearer we get to where the dead walk; for no man is ever visited by the dead except in his sleep. But enough.

Bishop Marvin dedicated Person street Methodist Church this morning. While there was preaching at all the other churches the great crowd centered there to hear this distinguished divine. The church was packed to its fullest capacity, at least seven hundred persons being inside, while all around out doors the people stood on benches and crowded every window. The Bishop's sermon was a grand one and was preached from St. John xliii:24: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much seed." Mrs. Dr. McCallum fainted in church and was taken home in a buggy by her husband. After the sermon a subscription was taken up and fifteen hundred dollars was subscribed which will pay the church out of its entire indebtedness and leave money ahead. The Baptist Sunday School got the new organ to-day by subscription to the little Sunday School paper "Kind Words."

The young lady six miles from here, who was killed by lightning, it glanced from a black jack and tapped her just behind the head as she stood in the passage, no other persons in the house were injured. Dr. E. Burke Hayward was immediately summoned but found the young lady dead and past all hopes of resuscitation, and with but the faintest sign of where the lightning had touched her.

Our reporter has one side of his head in a handkerchief and the above will have to suffice as a neuralgic report of the day.

Friday night's storm. A tremendous storm of wind, accompanied by severe lightning and loud thunder, with heavy rain and hail, passed over the city last night about 1 o'clock. The hail fell incessantly for several minutes in stones nearly as large as a pigeon's egg. The lightning was very vivid, and for an hour there seemed to be almost a continual flash. We fear that damage was done the growing crops. The storm came from the northeast and seemed to have spent much of its fury before reaching this point. —Denville News 12th.

Before the late President Lincoln moved to Springfield, or had attained to eminence in the law, he was postmaster in a small Western town. The office was a poor one, and he was poorer. He was also impecunious, and it happened that the agent of the Post-office Department was in town to collect the little sum due the government. A friend, thinking Lincoln embarrassed, came down to his office to loan him the sum necessary to meet the demand. Mr. Lincoln thanked him, and said he did not need any loan. While the two were talking the agent came in. The sum due was less than $100. Lincoln went to his desk and took out an old stocking, and turned the coin on the table. It was counted out and met the demand exactly. Well it might, for it was not only the exact amount due but the identical money itself that Lincoln had taken in. "Old-fashioned six dollars, post-rents, sixpences, old-fashioned cents, and all, were there. "I never use money that belongs to other people," said Lincoln, and that resolution went far towards making him President of the United States.

A woman advertising herself as the "Great European Lady" and "Wonderful fortune-teller" for the past four or five weeks, during which time she has driven a thriving business at "fortune-telling," "finding hidden treasure," "unraveling estranged lovers," &c. About two weeks ago a lady, whose name we for obvious reasons suppress, called to see this wonderful personage, and was induced to leave with her a silver watch valued at twenty-five dollars under a promise that by its use a large amount of hidden treasure could be pointed out to her. She was directed to call for the watch at the expiration of two weeks. At the appointed time the owner of the watch called to see the "Great European Lady" but the bird had flown, and now the victim is very anxious to find her. It is probable that she will try to practice the imposition upon others in some new field—to prevent which, as far as possible, we publish the following description of her person: In stature she is short and thick; age between forty-five and fifty; fair complexion; black hair and wrinkled about the eyes. She wears a large number of rings, and sometimes a large diamond on her forehead, and usually dresses in black silk. A fortune-teller answering to this description is wanted in this vicinity. —Norfolk Landmark.

FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON CITY, June 12.

The headquarters of the National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry, which, ever since the organization of the body in 1868 have been in Washington, will probably be removed to Louisville, Ky., in a short time. At the last annual session of the National Grange in Charleston, S. C., in February last, the executive committee was charged with the selection of a new point for headquarters to be located in one of the five Western States named, and the change was to be made within six months from the 1st of March last. The committee, it is understood, have, after due investigation, selected Louisville as the most eligible location, although it was expected that St. Louis would be chosen. Kentucky stands No. 5 as regards the number of granges, having 1,559. Indiana leads the list with 2,027 granges. Missouri has 2,026, Iowa 2,004; Illinois 1,584, and Kentucky 1,599. The total number of granges in the United States is 23,500, with an estimated aggregate membership of 1,500,000. The official history of the order, just published by the Secretary, shows that the total receipts from 1868 to 1874 inclusive were less than $5,000, while the receipts last year were $216,381. The order at present has $69,000 invested in Government bonds, and $19,000 in cash on deposit at the financial agency in New York.

SALE OF DANIEL WEBSTER'S LIBRARY.—Leonard & Co. began this morning the sale by auction of the books belonging to the private library of Hon. Daniel Webster. The books catalogued for sale are announced as being all from Mr. Webster's library, and as having all belonged to him, except a few which were the property of his son or other members of the family. A number of the books have Mr. Webster's autograph, though the larger part have no such additions to their value. The average prices brought this morning were fair, though there was generally little competition on those volumes. The highest price paid this morning was by Mr. Carleton, who bid in three volumes—all there were in the library—of Audubon's "Birds of America" at $225 per volume. A little nearly worn-out volume, called "An Exposition of the Weakness and Inefficiency of the Government of the United States of North America," which was started at 15 cents and ran up rapidly to $2.25, most of the bidders seeming to look upon the possession of such a book by the great expounder of the constitution as rather a good joke. A small 24mo. volume, containing the constitution, the articles of confederation and the Declaration of Independence, with Mr. Webster's initials, brought $2.37; "Wilson's American Ornithology," in nine volumes, sold for $4 50 per volume; Dodsley's "Annual Register, 1758 to 1821," seventy-seven volumes, sold for 37 1/2 cents per volume; Anstruther's "Exchequer Reports, Dublin, 1796," containing two autographs, sold for $4; "Bacon's Essays," with an autograph, brought $6; "Barber's Connecticut and New York Historical Collections," each volume with an autograph, sold for $5 each; a Bible, in two volumes, illustrated with Home's descriptions and autographs of Mr. Webster, sold to Mr. Brown for $13.50 per volume; "Memoirs of N. Bowditch," with Mr. Webster's name on the fly-leaf, in his own hand, sold for $5 25. The sale is to continue three days more. —Boston Journal.

TRE LADIES.

A young lady who had no time to spare for making garments for the poor has been engaged three weeks embroidering a blanket for her poodle dog.

Mrs. Dr. Tate was thrown from her horse while riding out Thursday evening and sustained very painful injuries. One arm was fractured about the wrist, besides painful contusions about the head.

A lady returning from an unprofitable visit to church, declared that "when she saw the shawls on those Smiths, and then thought of the things her own poor girls had to wear, if it wasn't for the consolation of religion she did not know what she should do."

At an auction of household good on Harrisonave, yesterday, when a woman had made a bid on an old bureau worthabout $2, a boy slipped around to another woman and whispered: "You see that woman over there with a blue bow on?"

"Yes," said another woman.
"Well, she says that no woman with a red nose can buy anything at this sale."

The woman with the red nose pushed her way into the crowd, and ran the price of the bureau up to $12, and as it was knocked down to her she remarked:

"I may have a red nose, but no cross-eyed woman with a blue bow on can bluff me." —Denville Free Press.

At the Pere la Chaise Cemetery, near Paris, there stands in a conspicuous position a splendid monument to Pierre Cabochard, grocer, with a pathetic inscription which closes thusly: "His inconsolable widow dedicates this monument to his memory, and continues the same business at the old stand, 161, Rue Montfard."

A Parisian paper relates that a short time ago a gentleman who had noticed the above inscription was led by curiosity to call at the address indicated. Having expressed his desire to see the widow Cabochard, he was immediately ushered into the presence of a fashionably-dressed and full-bearded man, who asked what was the widow Cabochard.

"I came to see here she is," "I beg pardon," "I wish to see the lady in person." "Sir, I am the widow Cabochard." "I don't exactly understand you. I allude to the relic of the late Pierre Cabochard, whose monument I saw yesterday at Pere la Chaise." "I see, I see," was the smiling rejoinder. "Allow me to inform you that Pierre Cabochard is a myth, and therefore never had a wife. The tomb you have admired cost me a good deal of money, quite a small fortune indeed, and although no one is buried there, it proves a first-rate advertisement, and I have no cause to regret the expense. Now, sir, what can I sell you in the way of groceries?"
