Imagine a packed audience, all intent on the stage, no restlessness, no whis pering, no gazing about at random, but double encoring most of the pieces, and with seeming regret to come away when the last was over, then you have it-a success—supply any adjective at pleasure, from grand and charming, to un-rivalled, parse it in the superlative and multiply by two, and then the half has not been said. "Lucretia Borgia." 4 pianos and organ, a mimic band of music that made the blood course hot, it inspired the Governor with patriotic atiment, for said he, "It is as good sir, as Percival Smith's march in Mexico." There is one feature in Baumann's concerts to be looked for in other schools, his girls warble like birds, here is a pliability about their palate which makes one feel they ought to be hung up in cages, captivating, sir, it did captivate the Governor, he inhaled a captivation from one of these sparklers, his eyes told the tale. But con let us mention some of these young ladies, they did well, and the pencil is is so openly deserving. Miss Katie Tate of Greensboro and Miss Mary Arrington of this city in "The Vow;" Miss Emma Graves of Hillsboro, "Whe the Tide Comes In;" Miss Clara Yates, Charlotte, "The Storm;" Miss Laura Holt, Alamance, "The Tempest;" Miss Minna Penick, Alamance. "Come, My Bark is Moving;" and Miss Isabel Williams, Fayetteville, "Thou Who Knowest Each Human Feeling." The bon mot of the evening was "The Laughing Chorus" from Martini given by the vocal class. There is a world of sentiment in the voice of Miss Scott, the handsome young lady teacher from Scotland ; give a you man fifteen minutes on a starlit nig hear her sing, and he can't find his way home. It is again in order to say that in the last piece "Inflammatus" where Mrs. Baumann so beautifully led the vocal class, going up, up, up, her voice frolicking with the high notes like bird on the wing, a distinguished ger tleman present remarked that she wa ed with the finest voice he had

DR. HOGE MAKES A SPEECH. In a rest between parts a call from the audience was made for Dr. Hoge who was sitting on the stage. He gracefully acknowledged it, saying there was but one thing he could talk about it was in all our hearts, and that was music. How perfectly astonishing that from eight little notes was made all the tion of sweet sounds, and all the music this world had ever heard, and for aught he knew those eight note were the basis for the grand anthe the choristers of heaven chanted in praises before the King. He told the class of young ladies some tended a concert at St. James Hall and Brussels and Venice, and secure the best artists in the world, but he hoped not to fall in the thermometer of the young ladies' regard when he told them that he sat bored under that me sic, and just when thinking how to vary the performance by going out to get ice cream and s eigar, he heard a low sob close by him, and looking around, there sat an Italian, his eyes wide open, his mouth open and his heart open, the whole man thrilled
