The City.

Hon. Josiah Turner is absent in Orange.

Paul C. Cameron, Esq., is in the city to day.

Madison Hodge, Esq., is out again, recovered from his fall.

"Too much rain" is now the universal cry in these parts.

Heavy breakets reported in Neuse River, at Tarboro, and in some of the creeks.

The stringency in the money market does not stop the buildings going up in the city.

It is a little strange, to say the least of it, that Governor Broden doesn't issue a writ of election for Orange.

The granite walls of the new government building are slowly but gradually rising to their full proportions.

We learn that a number of republicans—six or eight—will come to the Convention with the determination to amend the constitution.

A beautiful lunar rainbow spanned the northwestern sky last night about 6 o'clock. A more singular sight sky was perhaps never before seen. The east was lit up by the full moon, which shed a peaceful radiance over all that quarter; in the north the stars were out in all their glory, while in the west a storm of thunder and lightning and rain prevailed, overarched by this rainbow of the moon. This rainbow was not gorgeous in its tints like the solar rainbow, but it was perfectly distinct and beautiful of its kind.

THOUGH LOST TO SIGHT TO MERRY DEAR.

The oft-quoted line, "Though Lost to Sight to Memory Dear," originated with Ruthven Jenyns, and was first published in the Greenwich Magazine for Merchants, in 1701 or 1702. We give this whole poem:

Sweetheart good-bye! that blushing mail

Is spread to wait me far from thee,

And soon before the earthy gale

My ship shall bound upon the sea.

Purchases all desir'd and forsooth,

These eyes shall miss thee many a

Year.

But unforgetten every charm—

Though lost to sight, to memory dear:

Sweet heart, good-bye! one last embrace!

Oh, cruel fate, two souls to sever!

Yet in the heart's most sacred place

Thou, thou alone, shall dwell forever;

And still shall recollection trace

In Fancy's mirror, ever near,

Each smile, each tear, that form, that face—

Though lost to sight, to memory dear.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

NEWBURGH, August 8. This p.m. Robt. Gibson, Assistant Superintendent of the Newburgh Water Works attempted to murder Alfred Post, a prominent resident of the city and President of the Highland National Bank of Newburgh, by firing a pistol at him in the street. The bullet grazed Post's neck. Gibson aimed for a second shot but in his excitement failed to cock his weapon. Post got out of the way before Gibson could fire again. The latter was secured and committed without bail. Gibson charges that Post had something to do with his wife's leaving him.

BONN, August 17.

The session of the old Catholic Conference closed to-day. Archbishop Lyterius of Syria on behalf of the Greek church and Bishop Sandford of Gibraltar on behalf of the Protestant churches thanked Dr. Dollinger for the good results of the Conference which he had called together. They expressed the hope that the churches would continue to draw nearer together until there was an united universal church. Bishop Reinking closed the proceedings with a Te Deum in Latin.

BOSTON, August 17.

The assessment of the city shows a gain of real estate of 4-1/2 millions. The loss of personal property is 8-7/8 millions. The tax levy is reduced 12½ per cent. The receipts under license law are nearly half a million, whereof Boston pays over $50,000. and the rest are paid by the state.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 17.

A wealthy married man named John L. Kates was before a magistrate today charged with a felonious assault on Miss Pemberton. It appears that Kates seduced her when she was about fifteen years old and she claims that she has held her in a life of semi-slavery ever since.

Recently she attended a picnic without his permission and when she returned he charged her with infidelity, knocked her down beat her in a brutal manner and then tore her clothes off of her person, and after pouring burning fluid all over her set fire to her and endeavored to burn her alive, interference of some of the people in the house prevented the consummation of the design.

On Friday evening last he whipped her in a brutal manner and swore he would disfigure her so that she would never be able to go out. Great efforts are made by interested parties to keep the details of the affair from the public. Kates is held in $2,000 bail for his appearance at court.

CHARLESTON, Aug. 12.

There was an exciting time last evening in Columbia caused by the proceedings under Hobbes' corpus for the release of ex-Treasurer Parker. The application was heard at 9:30 p.m. before Judge Mackay. Parker's counsel claiming his discharge under provisions of the constitutions prohibiting imprisonment for debt. The sheriff's return alleged that the case was one of fraud, a charge which is expressly excepted in the constitutional prohibition of imprisonment for debt, and after argument Judge Mackay released the prisoner. The Court room was filled with an excited crowd and Parker was immediately rearrested on a criminal warrant for grand larceny, but his counsel waived an examination and urging the agent involved in alleged robbery and nothing to do with the amount of bail. They succeeded in getting him released on $2,000 bail. It is generally believed that Parker will escape and forfeit the bail. The New and Courier denounces the release of Parker as a gross judicial outrage, and a job put up by certain State officials who feared Parker would implicate them in his enormous robbery.

TELLING FORTUNES.

AN OLD WOMAN WHO TOLD THE TRUTH WITH COFFEE GROUNDS.

Corrected by F. C. CHRISTOPHERS, Market Square.

While the train was skirmishing along between Montgomery and Atlanta Wednesday, the 16th, I faced for my partner a Mr. R. H. Kelly, a prominent citizen in Montgomery. Mr. Kelly came from Iowa City just before the war, and remained with the South during the four years' strife, his wife remaining at Iowa City, and trying twice to get into our lines, but Grant had her arrested each time and taken back home. It was one day at Iowa City that an old woman came along and stopped at the hotel where Mrs. Kelly was boarding, and asked the laundry girls to let her tell their fortunes. They ran to Mrs. Kelly, who is a great favorite with them, and persuaded her to pass for a young girl and come down and fool the old woman. She consented, and so far all went well. But the old woman, when she had drunk her coffee, looked at Mrs. Kelly and then at the grounds in the cup, and said:

"You are a married lady, and your husband is far away; he has met with an accident, has hurt his leg, but it is not serious, and he will get well after a time."

"Has he broken his leg?" asked Mrs. Kelly in some alarm.

"No," said the old woman, "but he is on crutches, and will be for some time; the accident happened to him on water."

"I know that it is not so," laughed Mrs. Kelly, "my husband is not in the navy, and his business never takes him on the water." But the old woman persisted she had told the truth and went on.

The laundry girls joked her as she left and told her she just wanted to beg a cup of good coffee.

"But about this time" said Mr. Kelly "I was going by boat from Montgomery to Selma, and my foot caught in the hatchway, and caused such a hurt to my leg that I went on crutches for twelve months afterwards, but I never wrote home a line about it for fear of distressing my wife, and in fact all the letters I wrote were intercepted and not allowed to reach her. But just as the war ended a friend of mine chanced to get through the lines and went to see my wife at Iowa City. The first question she asked him was:

"Is Mr. Kelly well?"

"Yes, he is in fine health."

"Has nothing happened to him, hurt himself, or anything of that kind?"

"Well—yes"—said my friend, "he did meet with an accident some twelve months since, hurt his leg pretty badly while going by boat from Montgomery to Selma, but he is well now."

"Did he go on crutches?" asked my friend.

"Yes, he was on crutches about a year."

It is all over now, and Mr. and Mrs. Kelly are prominent and respected citizens in Montgomery, Ala.; but you better believe Mrs. Kelly will never have another old woman fooling around her house, after looking in the coffee grounds to tell her fortune. Reader, it's every word the truth as I have written it—but wasn't it a good guess?
