LEA & PERRINS'
is the only GENUINE
WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE.

We understand that there were two deaths in the penitentiary last night.

A new butcher stall has been opened on Martin street, opposite Citizens' National bank.

There are only four prisoners in our county jail. The usual status is between 40 and 50.

Cows running at large on Harpert and Wilmington streets are complained of as a nuisance.

Glorious, luscious and delicious Lunshaven oysters at Tim. Lee's restaurant headquarters.

John Fuller, a dandy, made his escape from the penitentiary, Wednesday night, and has not yet been re-captured.

The cotton receipts yesterday amounted to 514 bales. To-day the market is rather dull at 13. No demand for low grades. Trade in other branches still dull, but rather better than yesterday.

Messrs. Mott & Yearly, our enterprising marketers, have received a large order from the manager of the circus, to furnish that institution its supplies of meat, vegetables, fish and milk, during its stay here.

RAILROAD AGENCIES.—It is said that A. M. Lewter, at present agent of the North Carolina railroad at Salisbury, succeeds Geo. T. Jones, resigned, in the agency at this place. Mr. Lewter will be succeeded by John H. Bryan, formerly of this place, who has for some time been acting as assistant agent at that place.

RESIGNED.—P. W. Perry, who was for a long time supervisor of this infernal revenue district, and was transferred some months since to a New England district, has resigned clean and clear. It is said the reason for his extraordinary step is that he didn't believe in third-term villainy, and couldn't help it. He is straight-out for Blaine. It is said that one G. W. Chamberlain, from the Lord or his great antithesis knows where, is to be assigned to this district.

THE WELDON FAIR.—Begins next Tuesday, and as a large number of people of this section propose to attend, we give below a schedule of fares for the round trip from the various points along the line of the Raleigh & Gaston railroad: Raleigh, $3.50; Neuse, $3.20; Wake, $3.05; Youngsville, $2.85; Franklin, $2.65; Kitchell's, $2.40; Henderson, $2.15; Jamestown, $1.85; Ridgeway, $1.75; Warrenton, $1.60; Macon, $1.50; Littleton, $1.15; Gaston, 85 cents. A fast excursion train will leave Henderson daily during the fair at 6:30 in the morning and reach Weldon at 9:30; returning leave Weldon at 4:45 in the afternoon and arrive at Henderson at 7:45.

THE FREEDMAN'S SAVINGS BANK.—At a meeting of the board of supervisors of the Freedman's Savings Bank, held last Wednesday evening, Charles N. Hunter, the former assistant cashier of the Raleigh branch, was appointed agent to receive and forward the pass-books of depositors to Washington to collect the dividend of 20 per cent. to be paid them on the 1st of November and to afford them all necessary information. Benj. Rhodes, Rev. P. L. Spencer and Norfleet Denton were appointed a committee to render the agent all needed assistance, and to see that each book is promptly forwarded, returned and delivered. The agent will be at the office of Albert Vaughn on and after next Monday, between the hours of 9 and 3 o'clock. Depositors will take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

DELEGATES TO THE RICHMOND FAIR.—Virginia showed her interest in our fair not only by furnishing many articles for exhibition, but by sending numerous delegations of her representative sons, men eminent in every department of practical life. North Carolina will reciprocate by contributing more to swell the crowds at Richmond next week, than any of Virginia's sister states. Our State Agricultural Society has appointed these gentlemen as its special representatives at the Richmond fair, which begins next Tuesday: Col. T. M. Holt, Major J. C. Winder, John Nichols, Col. J. D. Whitford, Dr. B. F. Arrington, Col. P. Donan, Dr. Columbus Mills, Col. J. M. Heck, S. B. Alexander, Capt. W. J. Yates, Capt. J. R. Thigpen, J. L. Bridgers, A. H. Boyden, Major G. W. Grice, A. H. Shuford, Gen. T. L. Clingerman, Gen. W. R. Cox, Major J. A. Engelhard, Judge Daniel G. Fowle and Dr. G. W. Blackwell.

CANE PRESENTATION.

Another caning-scarp on a large scale took place in the dining-room of the Tarborough house to day at noon. Among the party of gentlemen present were Hon. Kemp P. Battle, Major J. C. Winder, Gen. W. R. Cox, Major Seaton Gales, Dr. P. E. Hines, R. G. Dunn, Middleton Lench, Col. Walter Clark, Major C. B. Root, Col. D. N. Carter, D. S. Wait, Dr. B. F. Arrington, Dr. George Graham, W. G. Upchurch, Isaac Oettinger and W. G. Upchurch. As soon as the crowd were seated, Major R. S. Tucker stepped forward, and said:

MAJOR TUCKER'S SPEECH.

Mr. PRESIDENT HOLT: I have been requested to represent our fellow-citizens on this occasion in conveying to you their appreciation of your services as president of the North Carolina Agricultural Society. Why I have been selected, I do not know, except that I am not connected with the management of the affairs of the society, whilst so many gifted sons, here present, could and would have performed this pleasing task much more satisfactorily. However, I come to perform the duty directly from my counting room and store, in the midst of a hurrying, busy life, to assure you of the appreciation of our citizens of your active efforts in promoting the agricultural interests of North Carolina at large, and of our own people.

I am one of those Mr. President, who have always reserved the right to condemn and oppose, what my judgment and interest did not approve; at the same time I trust I am above that sordid selfishness which cannot approve merititious action and duly well performed, even if it militates against my individual interest or that of my friends. Happily, however, on this occasion, we find nothing but what our judgment, interest and feelings approve.

I AM no stranger, Mr. President, to the labors necessary to the successful management of an agricultural society. In the early days, in the beginning, I may say of this great public work I had the honor to be, for a number of years, a member of its executive committee. I had the pleasure of being associated with the men of that day, Thos. Rufus Wilson, Whitaker, R. Smith, Dr. W. B. Holt and others. Most of them have passed to that place where no labor is performed, that place of peace and rest. May you and your associates continue to emulate their noble example and persevere in your great work, pressing onward and upward, your flag at the summit of the dome, with the motto, "Excellere" emblazoned on its folds.

I hold in my hand, Mr. President, a stick or staff presented to you by the citizens of Raleigh as a small token of their appreciation of the fidelity and zeal with which you have performed your duty. The gift is comparatively small in itself, but it serves a double purpose. It is intended as a moral support and encouragement. May it be a support to you in the every day walks of life, and may it bear your tottering limbs, and be a prop and staff on which to lean in the rear and yellow leaf of life. And here permit me to add my individual personal testimony to the success which has crowned your efforts. For years you and your, myself and mine, have been friends, each feeling rejoiced at the prosperity and success of the other. May time cement and increase these friendly associations.

Major Tucker was interrupted more than once by applause, and at the close of his little address there was a vigorous stamping, and clapping of approving canes and fists. Col. Holt, who was taken completely by surprise, rose and responded in tones full of genuine feeling:

COL. HOLT'S RESPONSE.

MAJOR TUCKER AND GENTLEMEN: I accept with gratitude and pleasure the elegant testimonial which you have so kindly presented. It affords me a double pleasure; first, because it comes from the citizens of Raleigh, and second, because it shows they appreciate my efforts in behalf of our state fair. There is no reason why our annual fair should not be the equal of any in the south or in the Union. We have a state grand in extent and limitless in resources; the only state in all our great sisterhood that filled out every blank in the census reports of 1870. Blessed with every variety of soil and climate, and with a people intelligent, honest, industrious and public spirited, North Carolina can and should have a fair that would be a glorious yearly reunion of east, west, north and south. And, in spite of the dismal forebodings of a few croakers, it bids fair to be what it should. The interest is increasing, and the exhibition itself is growing in size and importance every year. If the people only stand by our executive committee and co-operate with them, we will ultimately build up such an exposition as will be worthy of the proud and best state in the American Union. I again thank you for this handsome evidence of your confidence and regard.

The cane is a magnificent ebony, with a massive gold head, elaborately carved with agricultural emblems, and bearing this inscription: "To Col. Thomas M. Holt, President North Carolina Agricultural Society, from his friends in Raleigh." It was got up by our popular jeweler, Maher, at a cost of $65. At the close of the presentation ceremonies, Blackwell had an excellent little collation served, and in lavish libations of fine old sherry and bourbon, long life and prosperity were invoked for the North Carolina Agricultural Society and its president.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

"Through this association, the poor of our city are mainly provided for, and this has been its benevolent feature since the date of its organization. Last year this association distributed to the poor a hundred cords of oak and hickory wood at the nominal cost of $1 per cord, and over 600 rats to the destitute of our city. We mention the low price of wood to show the system of management and economy of its operations. To a private individual or to a particular church for instance, this wood would not have been delivered for less than $20 or $30 per cord. The railroads charge the association no freight. The plan of operation is such as to prevent, in a great measure, the impositions that would be practiced upon any individual. So it will be seen that if charitably disposed people will make their donations through this society, their money will buy more and be more likely to be distributed in the right channel, than when given promiscuously to street beggars and those who go from house to house, and are full of misrepresentations. The members of the association are now taking the initiative steps of preparation for the coming winter, and have made an appointment at the Tabernacle Street Baptist church next Sunday evening at half past 7 o'clock, for a grand mass meeting, at which time and place the public are invited to attend. Short addresses will be delivered by a number of distinguished men, and the services will be of general interest.
