CHRISTMAS TREES.

SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVITIES.

SWAIN STREET BAPTIST. According to previous announcement the children of the Sunday School, and members of the congregation, assembled on Christmas eve in the Swain street church to witness the beautiful and tastefully arranged trees, loaded with presents of every description to please the fancy of the children. There was a large crowd of persons present. and according to programme the exer-9:45 a. m. cises were opened with prayer by Rev. 9:30 a. m. J. D. Hufham, pastor of the church, after which a Christmas carol was sung by the school, with Miss Maule Shanks leading, and Miss Maggie Brummell presiding at the organ Too much cannot be said of these two blind young ladies, from the asylum, for the artistic manner in which they rendered their parts, reflecting great credit on that institution. After singing a beautiful Christmas hymn, from the pen of ex-Governor Holden, the trees were lighted and distribution of the presents begun. The tree for the main school being presided over by Messrs, Broughton, Womble and Birdsong, and many were the hearts made glad by the little tokens of remembrance received. The infant class tree was under the charge of the teachers of that class, Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Lougee, and more taste was displayed on it than on the one for the main school, they having some 60 little children to provide for and please, and the eyes of the little ones sparkled as their kind teachers would pluck from the tree, call their names and hand them a little present. Great taste was displayed by the ladies and gentlemen who had the task of purchasing and decorating the trees and room in hand. We saw none of the confusion usually aftendant upon such occasions, every thing was quiet and well conducted We missed, as no doubt many other did, the pleasant face of J. S. Allen the superintendent, whose presence adds much to the enjoyment of such occcasions. The room was handsomely decorated with festoons, wreaths.

the return of many more such. PERSON STREET METHODIST. The children of the Sabbath School of this church were presented by their kind teachers, and some liberal-hearted members of the church, on Christmas eve night with a large tree laden down with appropriate presents for those for whose benefit it was gotten up. The decorations of the tree and surroundings were heautiful and in every way appropriate. The ceremonies were inaugurated with singing, speeches &c. after which came the distribution of the gifts. The innocent joy of the children communicated itself to all around, and in all hearts the kindly emotions usual to the season had full sway.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH. The Christmas tree of the Presbyterian Sunday School at the parsons on Christmas eve, was an elegant affair. The fine hollies were laden with beautiful presents, and lighted by gas jets from pipes running all through the trees to the highest branches, presenting a beautiful and handsome appearance. The gement of gas was a contribution from Mr. Thos, Stevenson, the gas fitter and plumber. After the rooms had been comfortably filled the exercises commenced at 7 o'clock with Christmas songs from the children, a prayer by the pastor an d the recital of a Christmas carol by Mr. Fairchilds, after which the veritable Santa Claus made his appearance, causing unbounded astonishment among the little folks, and proceeded in a quaint, Santa Claus way to distribute the many useful and well selected presents to the happiest of children. It was a scene long to linger in CHRIST CHURCH.

Last evening despite the inclemency of the weather, the beautiful Christmas (Episcopal) church not only drew a large crowd of children, but the older heads were out in force. The room was very prettily decorated, and the tree as beautiful as care and good taste could make it. All the children received presents suitable to their ages, and many of the teachers were complimented with tokens of rememberance. The Christmas carols by the children were well rendered, and the pastor, Rev. Dr. Marshall, made a very happy address. The occasion was delightful to the little

DR. C. J. NALL.—This gentleman has THE ORIENTAL BRICK MA-

A NORTH CAROLINA INVENTION.

EDITOR SENTINEL: Since my connection with your valuable paper as agent and correspondent, I have en-deavored to show to your readers, and the outside world, that North Carolina. the outside world, that North Carolina, in some respects, is far superior to many of her sister states. In former letters, I mentioned new and important inventions which have been patented by North Carolinians. My object in this letter is to speak of another new patent, one that eclipses all other machines of a similar character, and is probably one of the greatest laborsaving machines of the age. It is the ORIENTAL BRICK MACHINE, and was patented by Dr. Samuel Martin, of Winston, N. C. Oot. 19, 1875. The patent is owned by Martin, Hinshaw & Co., of the above named place. The American Engineer gives an inter-shaw & Co., of the above named place. The American Engineer gives an interesting and detailed account of this wonderful invention, and believing it will be read with interest by all who have any state pride, I copy the article:

"Theattention of brick manufacturers, architects, contractors and builders in the United States and Canada is called to a novel method of making brick by means of a clay rolling-mill, invented by Dr. Samuel Martin, of N. C. and patented by him October 19, 1875, and owned by Messrs, Martin, Hinshaw & owned by Messrs. Martin. Hinshaw & Co., office at Winston, N. C. The principle on which this machine works in that of press and counterpress rolling force. It rolls elay within boxes or molds, without injury to the boxes or molds, with force similar to that for rolling metals. The capacity of this machine seems almost incredible, but it is said that thousands of incel-ligent men who have seen the machine work can youch for the trathfulness of the statements made to us. The machine is heavy, strong and durable, all made of iron and steel, and is supplied with forty molds, linked and forming an endless chain that works around two octagon pulley wheels. Each mold is supplied with a heavy movable bottom that travels with it; these bot-toms fall for the reception of clay and rise to deliver the brick while the chain is in motion from pulley to pulley. The molds and bottoms travel on a tramway or guides; the molds travel in a per-fectiv straight line; the bottoms are sup-plied with three legs, which are plunged from the front octagon pulley, letting the belly of the bottom rest on the tramwa at the bottom of the mold box. At thi point the mold is filled with clay while in motion by a shuttle-rack that pulverizes the clay as it falls from the nopper above. Moving onward it reaches the first press and counterpress rollers. The brick is here formed, the legs of the bottom pass through a grooved counter compress roller, made of steel, and at this point guides the bottom of the mold, taking the place of Oscar Pugh, son of John H. Pugh, of the tramway, while the compress roller above packs the clay or mortar within the mold, Escaping from these rollers the brick is forced upward slightly by the legs and the in-clines of the tramway. The brick then moves forward for its finishing conden-

set of press and counterpress rollers, similar to the first and of three times their weight. The compress rollers are driven by gearing, at a greater speed than the travel of the molds, while the counter compress rollers are driven by friction at the same speed as the mold After the brick leaves the last rollers it is forced upward one-fourth of an inch to break up its adhesion to the walls of the mold, and is then shorn even with the top of the mold by an angular knife. It is then forced upward to the top of the mold by the legs of the bottom and inclines of the tram, and onward to a receiving plane. The machine forces the brick from this plane to an endless belt which carries them into the kiln. It has been found by actual tests that the true working point of this machine is one hundred brick per minute, but it which the frame rests, weighs about fifteen tons. "For reasons thought to be logical "For reasons thought to be logical, the most perfect brick that can be made will be obtained from thoroughly pulverized clay, sufficiently damp to knit the clay well together in its passage through this rolling power. This machine, however, will make good solid brick from morter or from clay, either the clay will be a proportional and fresh from wet or dry, unpulverized and fresh from the bed or bank. These brick burn perfectly and require about the same amount of fuel as the hand-made brick It requires an engine of twenty to twenty-five horse power to drive one machine. To procure elay and kiln the brick at the rate of one hundred per minute also requires the services of six-teen to twenty hands. The brick can be made, kilned and burnt at an actual may be safely run to a much greater number, or as slow as seventy per min ute. As many as two hundred per minute have been made. This machine complete, including the sills of wood on cost of not more than two dollars and fifty cents per thousand; this estimate will cover all incidental expenses." This machine is running in an adjoin-ing yard in St. Louis against a Hydraulie machine that cost $80,000, and does more and better work. At the Industrial Fair last fall at Pittsburg, Penn. the Oriental took the premium over all others. It was subjected to the severest tests, and exceeded the expectations of its most sanguine friends. The price, $5,000, is very reasonable considering the work done. The brick are carried to the kiln by an endless belt, consequently are not touched with the hand until placed in the kiln. They do not require any drying; the water is extraoted as the brick pass through the rollers, so that the machine can be run in wet, as well as Pulmonary Complaints. Their safety
