OUR LATECOUNTY CONVENTION. We have heard a number of delegates object to the published proceedings of our recent county convention. They contend that while the resolution offered by G. H. Snow, in reference to Col. S. D. Pool, Superintendent of Public Instruction, was adopted, the one offered by W. P. Batchelor, in reference to W. H. Howerton, Secretary of State, was not. They contend that the committee, to whom both of the resolutions were referred, reported a substitute for Mr. Batchelor's resolution general in its terms of cond emuation of official turpitude, but did not include the name of Mr. Howerton, the committee taking the ground that as the Howerton matter was pending in court and a subject of judicial investigation. the convention could not with propriety adopt the original resolution.

Owing to the press of other business the reporter for this paper could not re-main in the convention during its session, and obtained his information, after the adjournment, from a delegate who took an active and prominent part in its deliberations. If the published proceedings were not a correct record of the convention, the error arose from incorrect information given to the reporter, and did not designedly misrepre sent. We should like to hear from delegates on the subje

RALEIGH, N. C., SATURDAY JUNE 17, 1876.

THE CONCERT AT THE PRACE INSTI- RECEPTION OF HON, Z. B. VANCE TUTE. - We always look forward to the annual concert of the Peace Institute with special delight and great expectations. The previous concerts at this excellent school have so won the hearts of all music-loving people that we are led to expect much, and are inclined to apply a higher standard than we are wont to do on other occasions.

Thursday night Professor Bauman had again an opportunity of demonstrating his eminent qualifications as a most thorough musician and teacher; he is so conscientious and painstaking that his pupils cannot but reap benefit from such ntiring devotion to his professio

The spacions hall of the Institute was througed to its utmost capacity by a select audience, comprising a number of strangers from other cities and friends and relatives of the graduating pupils. The decorations were appropriate and tasteful. 'The motto "Vera pro gratis' was beautifully wrought in evergrees and displayed on the wall facing the audience. On the rostrum, beneath this motto, were the four pianes including one of "Mathushek's" furnished by Mr. August Doepp for this occasion. Its sonorous singing and brilliant tone reminded one of a grand, and contrasted strongly with those of other makers.

Mr. Baumann's selections are always marked by judicious discrimination, yet we would have enjoyed the occasional intermingling of some simple, pathetic melody with which our musical literature abounds, especially the German school. This suggestion is not to be understood as a censure of Mr. Bauman's selections, for it is necessary on all such occasions to give way to some extent to the popular taste, and the publie is never satisfied without some musical pyrotechnics. The programme presented chiefly elaborate and sparkling compositions, which bore for the most part the characteristics of the Italian school. The rendering of the trills and cadenzas, which would have required some effort on the part of a prima donna, was highly creditable to the young performers.

The concert opened with a chorus by the vocal class; that it was remarkably well sung, with precision and obedience to the away of Mr. Baumann's baton, it is superfluous to aid, for we are not accustomed to hear a chorus dragged through under such able leadership.

The beautiful : of briffiant overture, "La Gama Lade ," by Rossini, for four pianos and organ, a great favorite with concert goers, was played with spirit, and in decided orchestral tempo; there vas no wavering, every motion was precise, and every note seemed to issue as from one plane, had not the immense volume of sound betrayed to us the presence of four. There were altogether three pleces for four pianos. Conspicuous arriong them was the overture to "Der Freischutz," played by the more advanced pupils. We take it for granted that the musical part of the audience are familiar with Weber's masterpiece. and although it presented many difficulties the young performers surmounted the n all.

The Peace Institute can boast of some very fine voices, clear and ringing, soft and mellow sopranos, and an excellent alto. The fair representatives of these went through their parts with artistic finish, and we have no fault to find with any of them. We would prefer to mention names, but fearing we might fall luto senseless, universal praise, without a critical delineation of detail. we beg to be relieved of the task.

Special praise is due to the performers of the piano solos, Grand Galop de Concert by Ketterer, and Lily Dale, with variations, by Thalberg. We noticed a dexterity of manipulation and distinctness of touch in the most rapid passages, which is rarely found among such young

The concert appropriately closed with a Cantata, entitled the "Faries of the Hill," and we were glad to take our leave and once more breathe fresh air, for although the music was so excellent, the heat and throng was too much for our delicate frame; it seemed to us like suffering exquisite pleasure.

Mr. Burwell has every reason to feel proud of his musical department. There are really few Principals who have the good judgment to select and the good fortune to retain a musical director of such artistic and gentlemanly qualities as Mr. Banmann.

We heartily wish Peace Institute a prosperous future.

[The above was prepared by a special reporter for this paper, a gentleman in every way competent to criticies. The report should have appeared in yesterday's issue, but was crowded out by other matter.]

AT HIS HOME.

A GRAND OVATION.

The Charlotte Observer of Friday gives a glowing account of the recep tion of Hop. Z. B. Vance, our nomine for Governor, at his home in Charlotte, Thursday evening :

Thursday evening:

A self-appointed committee having been advised in response to a telegram from Raleigh, yesterday morning, that Gov. Vance would be home last night on the 9-20 train, bills were printed and circulated upon the streets, calling for a ratification meeting in Independence Square upon his arrival. Long before the train came tar barrels were set on fire in the square, and a large and eagur crowd gathered upon the wet streets and anxiously waited for the train to come in order that they might hear what their distinguished townsman had to say after the honor with which the people had just crowned him. A delegation was in waiting at the depot when the train came with a six horse pheston, drawn by six grey horses. Gov. Vance, Col. Steele: Capt. Waring and Sheriff R. S. Harris, of Cabarrus, were given seats in this pheston, and were driven to the square, when, as soon as they appeared, the band struck up, and amid the music and in the light of the bonfires shout after shout of "hurrah for Vance" rent the air. When the vehicle came to a halt the enthuniastic multitude gathered around it as though they had never before seen the man whom they had assembled to honor. Amid continued applause the speakers were conducted to the stand which had been creeted for the occasion on astreet corner, and Capt, Waring rising upon this, introconducted to the stand which had been erected for the occasion on a street corner, and Capt, Warting rising upon this, introduced to the vast andience, in a few exceedingly tasteful remarks, "North Carolina's favorite son, the the tribune of the people, Zebulon B. Vance." He rose, and for fifteen minutes spoke to their delight. He was too tired to make them a long speech. So continued had been the evidences of the partiality and kindness which his fellow-citizens felt for him that since he left home last Monday morning he had had home last Monday morning he had had almost no rest at all. He had been the recipient of the most flattering demonstrations at Raleigh, and all along the way thence to Charlotte, and had been spoilt by popular applause to the extent that his clothes had become too small for him. At Durham, Greensboro, Salisbury and Concord, the people had turned out to greet him, and at the latter place they gathered at the depot with sky rockets, bottles of whiskey and things, and because the train would not stop long enough for him to make them a speech, some of them had gotten on the train and gone along with him. He had not expected this demonstration, for it had been said that a "prophet is not without honor save in his own country," and hitherto it had seemed to him that the farther he got from home the greater man he was. almost no rest at all. He had been the the greater man he was. placed him before the people it was the largest that had ever assembled in the state. Fully 1,000 delegates were present, and every county save one was represented. In point, too, of intelli-gence and character, it was highly respectable, and the unanimity which had pervaded its deliberations was remark-able. Individual interests and local interests were discarded, and those who were believed to be the strongest men were placed on the ticket, regardless of any of these things.

Everything presages success. Candid men, and men who were not extravagant, had told him that the ticket would gant, had told him that the ticket would sweep the state by 20,000 majority, and it remains with the people to verify this prediction. He thanked his fellow-citizens here and elsewhere for the handsome testimonials which they had offered of their confidence in and regard for them, and with this would introduce a fresh dog, our candidate for Congress, Col. Walter L. Steele, who was not so much exhausted as he. Col. Steele referred to what had been said about the workings of the convention, and told workings of the convention, and told more than Gov. Vance's modesty would allow him to tell. The speaker had never seen such an assemblage or such a fixedness of purpose, and a ticket which would win had been put out. It was unnecessary here to speak of the head and front of that ticket, and almost unnecessary to speak of any of the other candidates, for nearly all were gentlemen who were well known throughout the state. Jarvis had been a member of the legislature during the progress of reconstruction, and standing on the floor of the house, backed by but a handfull of men, he had battled but a handfull of men, he had battled with the cohorts of radicalism and for constitutional liberty. Engelhard, Kenau, Scarbrough, Worth and Love, were all spoken of in terms of high praise, and it was remarked that this was Samuel L, and not Levi Love, as had been supposed elsewhere and no doubt here. While speaking of Dr. Worth, Col. Steele took occasion to say that this gentlemen had told him that worth, Col. Steele took occasion to say that this gentleman had told him that so far from there being any truth in the report that Gov. Vance could not carry the strength of Randolph, he was stronger there than any twenty men in the state. Col. Steele told the people that they would hear of him during the campaign, and that for the present he would not detain them.

Last night was an appropriate open-ing of the campaign in Mecklenburg. Both of the speeches were stirring campaign addresses, and the happy tidings brought from Raleigh inspire the peo-ple here with high hopes. The politi-cal skies are bright, and a brighter prospect stretches out to us than ever Benjamin F. Boney, a former member of the Legislature, died in Alamance county on the 5th.

Beaufort Eagle: We regret to learn that a son of Sergeant Muller, of Fort Macon, was drowned last Sunday while bathing in the surf. His body has not been recovered.

Rev. F. J. Murdoch, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church, of Salisbury, preached the commencement sermon to the cadets of the Carolina Military Institute, in the chapel of the building on Sunday evening last. G. W. W. Blanton, of Shelby, says he killed a snake near town one day last week about two feet long with three heads, eight legs and one tail. They must drink fearfully mean stuff up in that section. The Shelby Banner says: We are lad to learn that the report in the Banner of the 27th ult., in reference to diss Ida Davis striking her sister in the head with a hammer, from the effects of which blow she died, is untrue. Oxford Torchlight: As we go to press we learn that on Saturday last, near Brassfields, in this county, James Kirkland, of Granville, was killed by Wm. Cawthorn, of Wake. The parties were cousins, and were returning together from the Federal Court.

The Southern Home says: The people of Rutherford, fired by the advance of the S. and A. R. B. through the adjoining county of Polk, and despairing of the completion of the Carolina Central any further west, are moving for a road from King's Mountain, on the Air-Line, via Shelby, to Rutherfordton.

William Mesimer was convicted at Rowan court of the murder of Mrs. Sa-rah Heilig, and sentenced to be hanged on the 7th of July. An appeal was prayed which vacates this sentence. The case will be heard before the Supreme Court at its present session, says the Statesville Landmark.
