NORTH CAROLINA.

THE CAPITOL AND UNIVERSITY.

The New York Observer, of a recent ue, under the above caption, has an article of so much interest to our readers in this state, especially this section, that we reproduce it entire. It is from the pen of "Roanoke," A majority of our readers are aware that "Hognoke" is the nom de plume of that cleaver and accomplished gentleman, Rev. C. II. Wiley:

In 1562 Gaspard de Coligny, the renowned admiral of France, sent an ex-pedition of two vessels, under Jenn R band, on a voyage of discovery, the real purpose of which was to select a home for himself and his persecuted fellow Huguenots in the wilds of the New World, should they be unable to protect themselves at home. Ribaud landed near the present site of St. Augustine, Florida, explored the country, and returned with glowing accounts of it. The admiral, charmed with his re-ports, determined to found a colony of his Protestant countrymen, and in 1564, sent six ships with 500 emigrants, un-der charge of Rene Laudoniere. They anded safely, built a fort and called it Arz Carolina, or Fort Carolina, and christened the whole country Carolina, after Charles IX. Twenty years after, when Sir Walter Raleigh's colony, under Ralph Lane, was first established on Rosnova Island, Quest Bess, so charmed with the descriptions which had been sent to her court, ordered the country to be called Virginia, in honor of her virgin self; and the name Virginia superseded that of Carolina, until that was revived by the patents of her successors, and was applied to the territory south of 36 deg. and 30 min.

The history of this colony is one of the most remandic and interesting and the most romantic and interesting, and filled with heroic incidents. Those Frenchmen proved themselves men of unyielding faith, iron will and quenchless courage. Raleigh's ships entered Hatteras Inlet, 1584, and it was not till nearly one hundred years afterwards that the pioneers came in sight of the wonderful Blue Ridge country. North Carolina has been slow in its growth from the first, but she has been sure. All over her soil was sown the seed of a sturdy commonwealth, and, unexcep-tionably exempt from large foreign immigration, hers to-day is the most homogeneous people among the States of the Union. The principal stream of blood that flows through her voice is not Anglo-Saxon, but Celtic, Scotch, and Scotch-Irish. They are the men who maintained civil and religious liberty at home when all others who had contended for it were subdued. They blew the dying spark again into a full blaze, and transplanted in the virgin soil of America the tree of liberty, to its benign fruits to-day. On the 22d of July, 1584, Sir Walter Raleigh's little fleet entered Hatteras Inlet. What a beroic attempt was his to people this magnificent domain; what a sad fate was his; his crime was his patriotism. History has fully vindicated and avenged him. No name aside from Washington deserves to be more identified with American history. It is well that the loveliest city in North Carolina perpetuates his name and honors his memory. Raleigh is indeed a beautiful city, resembling in some parts New Brans-wick and New Haven,-though in natural beauties, in the grand old oaks and towering elms, surpassing any place we know. As the capital of the State it is the centre of political influence. Its State House, of granite, in the Doric style, is one of the best in the country, and is surrounded by a beautiful enclosure of forest trees and evergreens. A fine statue of Washington, by Canova, stands on the south side, Here are three leading female seminaries and the state deaf and dumb and lesane Asylums. There are ten or twelve churches, supplied with an able ministry. The government is building a custom house and post office, of solid granite, at the cost of $300,000. A ride of twenty-eight miles by rail, and then a ride of twelve miles by stage, brings you to Chapel Hill and the University of North Carolina. The University grounds are grand, the build-ings in good order, and the old oaks and elms wear a classic look. This was the first commencement under the restoration; for the University has been restored to its legitimate sphere of use-fulness, and it is now hoped that it may rise to its former position among Amer-ican colleges. There was no gradua-ting class. The young men, however, of the literary societies acquitted them selves with honor. Hon. A. M. Wad-dell, M. C., delivered a strong nud-eloquent address to the young men on the "Changed Economic Relations of the South and the duty of her youth in view of them."

Hon. Robt. P. Dick, Judge of the U. S. Court, delivered an admirable ad-dress on the "Anglo-American." Judge Dick was a consistent Union throughout the war; and the sel of him at this first commencement of him at this first commencement. of him at this sale legislature, der a democratic legislature, to the and appeal to be true to the Union of States, received hearty applause from an audience intensely southern.

The degree of D. D. was conferred on Rev. Evander McNair, of Arkansas, and Rev. Joseph C. Huske, of Fayetteville, N. C. May it soon be througed with hundreds of earnest young men, consecrating their powers to their country and their God.

TAR DROPS.

The diphtheria prevails in Newbern. Beaufort is to have a colored hotel this summer, which the Eagle says will be first-class in every respect.

Seventy-five thousand young shad were put into the Dan river last Monday, and the same number was afterwards put in the Catawba river.

Wadesboro Herald : The trustees of the colored Zion Methodist church have closed the door of their church against Alexander, the presiding elder of this circuit. He is charged with undue intercourse with some of the women of his congregation.

The Rockingham Courier says: The people of Montgomery and surrounding counties propose to celebrate the 4th of July by having a large barbecue at Eldorado in the fork of the Yadkin and Uha rie rivers. Gov. Vance, Col. Steele Col. Merehead and Luke Blackmer Esq., are invited to deliver addresses.

The New York Tribone thus goes for "Capting Peru Settle," who is just now looming up as the probable gubernatorial candidate for radical honors, in this state. "The irrepressible Thomas Settle has come to the surface in North Carolina politics once more. This time he is a candidate for the republican nomination for governor. Thomas' main qualification consists in his ability to settle out of sight whatever party nominates him."

The Newbern Nut Shell says : On Sunday last one of the seargents at Fort Macon lost his son in a horrible manner, The little boy was in surf-bathing in the rear of the Fort when he suddenly disappeared from eight, and from the commotion made in the water and the non appearance of even the least vestige of the boy it was presumed that a shark had taken him under water and devoured him. The mother of the little fellow was lying very low in one of the dwellings at the Fort, and for fear the shock would result in her death, the horrible news was not told her.

Charlotte Observer: The postoffice dead-lock continues, We have no postmaster, and the countenances of numer ous applicants still wear anxious expressions. One thing the contest has done, if no more; it has created a breach in the radical ranks which can not be easily healed. Several of those prominent hitherto in political contests are outspoken in their dissatisfaction. and swear that no member of the "Bill Smith ring" can ever again get vote or influence from them. Bissell, a prominent republican tells us, goes so far as to say that if Smith should be nominated on the state ticket he would can vass the county against him. Frazier does not sympathize with the Bissell faction, but he is an enemy to the Smith ring. Bissell is a friend to Sloan, likewise Balley. McAlpine is his own friend, and seems to be opposing and opposed by everybody. Every radical hand is against the Jenkinses, and their hand is against every radical in town. McDonald is considered clear out of the fight, but some of the knowing ones predict his re-appointment, after all of his troubles. This, however, is hardly probable. And so the scramble goes. It has assumed a Kilkenny cat fight phase, and the end is not yet.
