

POETRY.

FROM THE HUDSON WHIG.
TIME.

I saw him hastening on his way,
And marked his light'ning flight,
Where'er he moved there stern decay,
Spread its destructive blight,
Rapid the gloomy phantom hied,
Enveloped in the storm—
His eye shone out in sullen pride,
And fearful was his form.

I saw him grasp the Warrior's wreath,
Won in the gory fray;
The laurel withering sunk in death—
Its beauty fled away,
That wreath was stained with bloody dew,
Unhallow'd was its bloom—
It met the phantom's chilling view,
And bowed beneath its doom.

I saw him pass by beauty's bower,
And listen to her lay—
Around the spot was many a flower,
Blooming its summer's day;
With icy heart the spectre came,
Her lovely form compressed—
She met his lurid eye of flame—
The tomb-stone tells the rest.

On youth's warm breast his hand he prest,
'Twas cold as mould'ring clay—
He laid his arm on manhood's breast,
The life pulse ceased to play,
His fell siroc o'er Nature past
And low she drooped her head—
Her blossoms withered in the blast
And all her virtue fled.

FLORIO.

From the Long-Island Star.

a mystery to me; but I soon found that the nits were impregnated after they were deposited on the hair of the horse. The male fly does not make its appearance until the latter part of August, and has every appearance of the female fly, except it is somewhat smaller, & has not the tail or sting of the female. You will frequently see two male flies in September or October, contending for the chance of impregnating the nits, and they frequently engage and fight with the greatest obstinacy, in order to obtain the favorite employment. The nits usually remain about eight days after impregnation before the bot is fit to enter the bowels of the horse, at which time they make a small hole in the end of the knit; but they frequently remain in the knit for weeks or even months after they are produced—yet if the lips or tongue of the horse, covered with warm saliva, come in contact with the nit, the bot immediately leaves the nit and adheres to the tongue, and is swallowed with the food of the horse. You may wet the palm of your hand with warm spittle and apply it to the nits on your horse for a few seconds at a time, and you can see with the naked eye a number of small insects on your hand; but if you view them through a magnifying glass, they exactly resemble the bot. It is an easy matter to scrape the nits off from a horse once a week in the months of September and October; and a horse that is so served will never be troubled with the bots. I have tried a great number of medicines, in order to dislodge the bots from the bowels of the horse, and find it a very hard thing to accomplish; but have found that a table spoonful of the powder of the blue flag-root, in a fresh state, given to a horse, will frequently expel a great number of bots from his bowels. The horse is a very useful animal, and every discovery that has a tendency to prolong his life is of public utility.

DESCRIPTION OF POETRY.
Not by Ld. Byron—but by John Neal, Esq.
Extract from the preface to the "Battle of Niagara."

"Did you ever see a beautiful woman—and stand still till your sight grew dim in wondering at her?—that was poetry. The language of heaven—of him who embroidered the firmament—and fashioned the loveliness of woman—is poetry. You felt in looking at her—an indefinable—thick-coming luxury—a bewildering and religious delight."

ANECDOTES.

On a review of the Prussian army by the King there happened to be a French soldier who could not speak the Prussian language. His platoon officer told him the King would ask him, how old he was? to which he must reply (in Prussian) 30, how long have you been in the service?—6 months—if he liked his pay and rations?—both. The King happening to change his mode of interrogation, first asked,—how many years have you been in the service? Thirty. How old are you?—Six months. Are you a fool, or I? both.

A gay spark, who had taken up lodging at a public house in London, and got considerably in debt, had absented himself, and took new quarters. This so enraged the landlord, that he commissioned his wife to go and dun him; which the debtor hearing of, he declared publicly, that if she came he would kiss her. "Will he?" quoth the lady, "will he? Give me my bonnet, Molly, I'll see whether any fellow on earth has such impudence." "My dear," said the cooling husband, "pray don't be too rash, you don't know what a man may do when he is in a passion."

Two young attorneys, by the name of Root and Bush, chanced to meet an Idiot at a tavern—to amuse themselves, they put questions to him; at last, they wanted his opinion what sort of a country he thought Heaven was; he very honestly replied, he thought it was a plain smooth country, where there was not a bush, nor root, nor, never would be.

In a recent duel between two lawyers, one of them shot away the skirt of the other's coat. His second observing the truth of his aim, declared, that had his friend been engaged with a client, he would very probably have hit his pocket.

INSANITY.
In a cause respecting a will at Darby assizes, evidence was given to prove the testatrix (an apothecary's wife) a lunatic, and, among other things, it was deposed, that she had swept away a quantity of pots, lotions, potions, &c. into the street, as rubbish. "I doubt," said the learned judge, "whether sweeping physic into the streets, be a proof of insanity."—"True my lord" replied the counsel, "but sweeping away the pots certainly was."

TWISTIFICATION.
What is your name? said a gentleman to a porter. My name, replied the fellow, is the same as my father's. And what is his name? said the gentleman. It is the same of mine. Then what are both your names? Why, they are both alike, said the porter.
