

FOR THE SENTINEL.

Messrs. Editors,

If you have twelve sweeter, and more appropriate lines on your file, you need not publish the following, by Mrs. Hosland.

ON WOMAN.

Ye are stars of the night! ye are gems of the morn,

Ye are dew drops whose lustre illumines the thorn;

And rayless that night is, that morning unblest Where no beam in your eye lights up peace in the breast,

And the sharp thorn of sorrow sinks deep in the heart,

Till the sweet lip of woman assuages the smart!

'Tis hers o'er the couch of misfortune to bend, In fondness a lover, in firmness a friend;

And prosperity's hour, be it ever confest, From Woman receives both refinement and zest;

And adorned by the bays, or enwreathed by the willow,

Her smile is our meed, and her bosom our pillow!

COURTSHIP.

By Mrs. Carey, authoress of 'Lasting Impressions,' a celebrated novel.

When Baldwin first woo'd, I said 'No, I confess,

Because I had heard people say, That the men were so nice, if too soon we said 'Yes,

They with scorn would our frankness repay. So I blush'd and look'd down—

Nay, endeavor'd to frown, And cried—Go! you but mean to deceive me. But he smil'd when I said

That I ne'er meant to wed, And protested he did not believe me.

Then next he renew'd his confession of truth, I tried, but in vain, to say 'No;

For I thought it a pity to frown on the youth, When a smile could such pleasure bestow,

So I held out my hand— But said "pray understand—

If hereafter you slight or deceive me, Though sorry to part,

I shall not break my heart," He smil'd, and appear'd to believ'e me.
