Foreign Intelligence.

LATE FROM ENGLAND.

The packet ship Leeds, Capt Stordard, arrived at New York on the 3d inst. from Liverpool, having sailed on the 27th of April, and brought regular advices to that date inclusive. For the following extracts we are indebted to our correspondents of the Mercantile Advertiser Gazette, and National Advocate.

The new Administration had not yet been formed, and much anxiety continued on the subject.—A negotiation was going on with the Marquis of Lansdowne, to bring in the Whig Party. Propositions which had been made to him, were expected to be decided upon on the 26th.

Mr. Scarlett has accepted the office of Attorney General. Sir N. Tindal remains as Solicitor Genl.

The papers state, That Viscount Dudley and Ward, take the office of Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs; but it is understood that the appointment is merely a temporary arrangement.

The negotiation with the friends of Marquis of Lansdowne is still proceeding, but nothing has yet been settled.

Mr. Backhouse, who was for many years private secretary to Mr. Canning, and lately one of the Commissioners of Excise, succeeds Mr. Plunkett as under Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Mr. Robinson will take, we believe, the title of Lord Goodrich, and Sir C. Abbott that of Lord Tenterden.

The Courier says the negotiations between the Marquis of Lansdowne and Mr. Canning, are still in progress.

The seals of the Foreign Office are designed for Lord Dudley. We are not without hope, therefore, that it may be Mr. Canning's wish, if the arrangement shall be found practicable, at the close of the Session, to resume the direction of the Foreign Affairs in the country.

Mr. Plunkett has declined the office of Master of the Rolls, for reasons, as we understand, which are every way creditable to the Rt. Hon. Gentleman. He goes to the House of Lords, however, as a strenuous and able supporter of Mr. Canning's government.

Among the new ministry the following may with accuracy be named: Mr. Canning, first Lord of the treasury, and Chancellor of the Exchequer. The Rt. Hon. F. Robinson, (with the title of Lord Goodrich) secretary for the colonies. Lord Harroby, president of the Council. Lord Dudley and Ward, foreign secretary. Mr. Huskisson, president of the board of trade. Mr. Wynne, president of the board of control. Lord Bexley, chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster. And Marquis of Anglesea, master of the ordinance. In addition to the above, it is expected that the Marquis of Lansdowne will be the home secretary; this, however, is not as yet definitively fixed.

Several names have been mentioned as likely to fill the office of lord privy seal, but none with any confidence.

The Duke of Devonshire is understood to have been appointed lord chamberlain, and the Duke of Leeds, master of the horse.

Mr. Frankland Lewis has been named to succeed Mr. Goulburn as secretary for Ireland.

During the whole of yesterday, rumours respecting the formation of the Ministry have been in circulation, different in their nature from those which have been promulgated for some days past. The uncertain state in which the arrangements between Mr. Canning and the Whig Party appear, has caused it to be rumoured that it was more than probable the Marquis of Lansdowne would not coalesce with the Premier; then again, if he did come into the Administration, he would be appointed Premier, and Mr. Canning return to his foreign Secretaryship; this, however, was by no means credited. Nothing respecting the progress made towards the settling of these important matters was known in the City, until the Courier announced the appointment of Mr. Scarlett as Attorney General; this has given general satisfaction.

LONDON, April 26.

THE MINISTRY.

During the past week, the progress in filling up the offices of the abdicated Cabinet Ministers has been more slow and tardy than we apprehended. This probably arises, not from the paucity of eligible statesmen friendly to the new arrangement, but from the delicacy of Mr. Canning's situation, and the difficulty of adjusting the common principle on which the new administration is to rest, namely, that the Catholic shall not be made a Cabinet question. In the mean time, the new Premier continues to receive from the press and the public, general support and almost unmixed applause.—The metropolitan journals, known as the advocates of Whiggism, are loud in their praises; while the leading Tory papers, particularly the Courier, the Morning Post, and New Times, are not less decided in supporting the efforts, and eulogizing the character of the new Minister. In exact proportion to the public patronage, Mr. Canning requires, will be the odium bestowed upon the retired ministers, who as far as at present appears, have deserted their post and their Sovereign, from a personal dislike to the "man whom the King delighteth to honour." The time however is approaching, when an explanation will be called for, and no doubt will be given. If, contrary to all the ideas we have hitherto formed upon this subject, Mr. Canning attempted to forward his favorite measure, by pressing upon his colleagues a departure from the principle that had governed Lord Liverpool's Cabinet, and this shall appear as a palpable fact, we pronounce, in the confidence of certainty, that his administration will not be of two months duration. On the other hand, if the Right Hon. Gentleman has pursued the straight forward course ascribed to him, and adheres to it in the selection of his new coadjutors, we see nothing that can injure him either in the eyes of his sovereign, or in the estimation of the nation.

We are not aware that a single appointment has been added to those we noticed last week, though every one of those we announced, have been confirmed. The Gazette of Tuesday records the elevation of Sir J. Copley to the peerage, under the title of Baron Lyndhurst, as a necessary preliminary to his entering upon the Chancellorship.—The negotiation has been, and is still carrying on, between Mr. Canning and the Marquis of Lansdowne, through the respectable medium of the Duke of Devonshire, and although nothing decisive has transpired, the general opinion is that the noble Marquis will take office. It is tolerably well ascertained, that in the early part of the week, to Mr. Plunkett was assigned the office of Master of the Rolls, but that subsequently the appointment was abandoned, and it is now understood he is to be called up to the House of Peers without office. Mr. Robinson and Chief Justice Abbott, are also to be elevated to the Peerage. In the absence of official announcement, rumor assigns to

The Duke of Portland, Lord Privy Seal.
Lord Dudley and Ward, Foreign Secretary.
Duke of Devonshire, Lord Chamberlain.
Duke of Leeds, Master of the Horse.

Whether this arrangement has any foundation in fact, it is impossible for us to say; nor would it be wise to hazard further conjecture, as in the course of a very day the official notifications will be made known. Parliament meets on Tuesday, and then, if not before, the whole secret will be out.

The President's Proclamation, interdicting the intercourse with the British W. Indies, was carried out by the Birmingham, which arrived at Liverpool on the 23d. It was published in all the papers, but we do not observe any other comment on the subject, than that it was the only course left to the President.

The British ship of war Tweed, with nearly two millions of dollars, and a large quantity of cochineal, arrived in England on the 24th.

GREECE.—Corfu, March 24.—Athens is at length delivered (there can no longer be a doubt of it) from the presence of the enemy; the Greeks have succeeded in chasing Redschid Pacha from the town. All the letters announce to us the complete victory which the defenders of their country have gained over the Turks. Colletti and General Caratosa had already disembarked on the Athenian territory 1400 paleari of Olympus. The corps of Macedonians, Thracians, and Thessalians, confided to the care of D. Eurian and Gregory Stoutzo, were in advance at the camp of Eleusis.—Towards the end of the last month, Maourmichaeli arrived in the same camp; he who, from the commencement of the Greek revolution, has made so many sacrifices for the liberty of his country. He brought with him 1500 Mainotes. The number of the Greeks, at this time assembled in Attica, amounted to more than 6,000 men, and Kioutahi. Seraskier of the Turkish army, had nearly 8,000 soldiers; but there was a remarkable difference in the two armies. The Turks, who were beaten at the Piracus, on the 16th February, and who returned to Athens on the 18th or 19th of same month, has lost their courage; their provisions were also short, and they were compelled to act, in order to get out of the difficulties of their situation. The Greeks, who expect no further reinforcements, wished for nothing else but a third decisive action, and a moment favourable to their wishes failed not to present itself. On the 2d March a part of the troops of Redschid Pacha directed their march towards Mount Pentelicus, in order to retreat into Bocotia; the Greeks had quitted their camps at Eleusis, and advanced as far as Cephissus. Having from that station noticed the retreat of the enemy, they fell on the rear; the Turkish cavalry, which the Seraskier commanded in person, rallied, and withstood the attacks of the Greeks for 3 hours. Redschid Pacha shewed in this affair great ability; a party from the Ionian Isles, commanded by Eumorphopoulos, and some Mainotes, having recognised the Pacha, made two attempts to reach him, but they were repulsed; at length the Turks retired towards the hill of Brillissos. During the night nothing was heard but the enemy's cannon, and musket shots from every quarter. On the 3d, very early, the Greeks hemmed in the enemy very closely; the Turks kept their position until one in the afternoon; when, favoured by the dense smoke which covered all the country round, they directed their march northward, and succeeded in making their way. The number of the killed and wounded is not yet ascertained; a great many Greeks are wounded. As to the Turks, it is presumed that one-third of the army of Redschid remains on the field of battle.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 28.
The Porte shews itself decidedly averse from accepting the proposal of the English and Russian Ambassadors, in favour of the Greeks, and the Reis Effendi has been dismissed because he did not protest with sufficient energy against all intervention. Six thousand of the new troops are to march immediately to Salonichi, to go to the aid of Omer Pacha, who is closely blockaded in Negropont.—Mr. Stratford Canning and M. de Ribeaupierre have daily conferences. They had fixed the 20th for the expiration of the time given for an answer, and yet they have not taken any farther steps, though the Divan has not given them any official answer.

From the New-York Evening Post, May 31.
THE SEA SERPENT.

We have copied from an Irish paper, handed to us for the purpose, another attestation to the existence of the sea serpent. Those who refused to give credit to the accounts of the sea serpent from the eastward, which, however, it seems to us were very well authenticated, will probably be still slower to believe this narrative on account of the extraordinary nature of some of the circumstances. The account however, is drawn up in good form, and is provided with the attestation of several respectable looking signatures; the name of the vessel, master and mate, are given, so that if it be a fabrication, the author of it has given an easy clue to its detection.

To the Editor of the Cannaught Journal.
Quebec Trade, off South Islands of Arran, }
Galway Bay, Feb. 8, 1827. }

Sir: Having this favourable opportunity of transmitting to you the following wonderful occurrence, which may be the means of setting at rest all doubts as to the existence of a marine monster, supposed to be the sea serpent, I readily do so, particularly as I have so many respectable witnesses to support me in the truth of what we saw. Being bound from Rhode Island for Liverpool, on yesterday morning the south island of Arran came in sight, 30 miles east. We at the same time discovered, about two miles ahead, a vessel, seemingly a wreck, not having a spar or rope standing. On nearing, I ordered the gig and six men to board her, and was shortly after hailed by the mate, who was one of the party, for assistance; they pulled from the wreck with all possible speed. I have the Quebec to the wind, and presently learned that Thomas Wilson, being the first to board, was instantly devoured by a most horrible animal, the like of which they had never seen or heard of. By this time the wreck was driven to about a cable length of our stern, from which I could plainly and distinctly see a monster of the serpent kind, lying partly coiled upon the deck, its head erect about four feet, and its hind part in the hatches, the hat of poor Thomas lying close alongside it. The surprise and consternation which struck all on board deprived us of the thought of planning any mode for its capture, were any such thing possible; the thought of our unfortunate companion filled us with horror. However, I fired a shot from a six pounder, which unluckily could not be brought to bear sufficiently high. It struck the hull at the same moment the animal raised its head, body and tail, in 6 or 7 folds, the height of a man each, extending itself from the tiller to the bows; its eyes were large, of a red color, and much distorted, its throat and neck larger than any part, of a green hue, as were its body and sides, and the back black and scaly; it had ears or fins suspended near the head, similar to an eel, and on the nostrils a horny excrescence, blunt and about 18 inches long; its clops were broad and flat. Whilst I was preparing a second salute with ball and slugs, it glided majestically into the sea, gave a splash with its tail, and disappeared. Shortly after, myself, John Adams, mate, Mr. William Nightingale, and Mr. Robert Croker, passengers, boarded her, and with grief had our foreboding for the fate of Wilson verified, he being no where to be found; the vessel was water logged, & in a sinking state; a substance of a tar like nature, but highly corrosive, as it blistered the hands upon taking it up, was upon the deck, some of which has been preserved; it is supposed to be the excrement of the animal. Our conjecture is, that the monster, being attracted by the bodies of the sufferers in the wreck, had taken up its abode there, and devoured them. We consider its length to be about 60 feet, and its girth from 9 to 12 feet.

I remain, sir, your obedient servant,
THOMAS CLEARY, Master.

We, the undersigned, certify the truth of the above,
JOHN ADAMS, Mate,
WILLIAM NIGHTINGALE, and
ROBERT CROKER, Passengers.
P. S.—Mr. Croker, having occasion to proceed to Dublin, chose that route for going to Liverpool, and will be the bearer of this statement. P. C.
