THE BISCUIT. From the Military Swetch Book of a British Offi-CET.

* Twould disarm The spectre death, had he the substantial pow BYRON. er to arm.

Our advanced guard had been skirmishing with the enemy for five days-and with empty stemachs. The commissary of the division had either missed us in his march with the provisions, for which he had been despatched to the rear, or else had not been successful in procuring a supply : but whatever might have been the cause, the consequence was unpleasant to us: for the men, officers, and all, were wholly without provision for three days. At the time the commissary went to the rear, two pound of hisquantity we were forced to exist for five days, on the spot. The captain went like a child. for nothing was to be bought. if we had been a morse of food. Most of the men, from having been accustomaged their little stock of provisions so economiwere so gastronomically ingenious and heroic, gr. at appetite and little prudence, who saw and all were then engaged, left few without that piquant relish for their food, which the rich citizen, in the midst of his luxury, might gladly exchange half his wealth for ; the greatest of them all, in taste as well as in purse, can never enjoy his epulation with so enviable a zest, as these campaigners did their coarse dry beef and flinty

As the men grew weaker, the work grew heavier : and as hunger increased, so did the necessity for physical exertion. The enemy were constantly annoying us, and every hour of the day brought a skirmish either with their little squads of cavalry, their riflemen, or their voltigeurs. The rifles would advance by the cover of a hedge, or hill, perhaps, while the voltigeurs would suddenly dart out from a ditch in which they had crept under cover of the weeds, and fall upon our pi kets with the ferocity of bull dogs; and when they were mastered, would (if not killed, wounded, or held fast, scamper off like kangaroos. In like manner, the cavalry would try to surprise us; or, if they could not steal upon us, would dash up, fire their pistols, and, if well opposed, gallop off again, and particularly if any of our cavalry were near: for they never liked close querters with the British dragoons, owing, no doubt, to the superior strength and power of our horses; this is as regards mere skirmishing. The French dragoons, when so situated as to be able to ride close to ours, without danger of "cut and thrust," would skirmish for hours-they would retire, load, advance, fire, and off again; but they very prudently disliked the steel.

On the fifth morning after the commissary had very sharp brush with the enemy. A company of infantry and a few dragoons were ordered, to dislodge the French from a house in which they had a party, and which was necessary to the security of our position: for from this house annoying manner. The French, not more than about fifty in number, made a considerable resistance, they received the English with a volley from the windows, and immediately retreated to a high bank behind the house: from this point they continued to fire, until their flank was threatened by our dragoons, when they retreated in double quick disorder, leaving about fifteen

In about an hour after the taking of the old house in front, I went out from our hut in a five of our men wounded, led and carried by Salmon of Fayetteville, to take charge of the attended to with punctuality and despatch.

Orders or Work, left at Mr. Richard Rob party now joined me, and walked back to the house, to give farther directions about wounded men not yet removed. When we had gone about 50 yards, we met a wounded soldier carried very slowly in a blanket by 4 men. As soon as he saw the officer who was along with me, he cried out in a feeble but forced voice, "Stop! stop!-lay me down :- let me speak to the captain." The surgeon, who was along with him, had no objection, for (in my opinion) he thought the man beyond the power of his skill, and the sufferer was or rather between the shoulder and the small Farm. threat: the ball passed apparently downwards, thing he could to stop the blood, but found, from the situation of the wound, that it was impossi-

You saved me once from punishment, which you all knew afterwards, that I was unjustly sen tenced to. God bless you!" Here the tear came from his eyes, and neither the captain nor any one around could conceal their kindred sensation. All wept silently.

The poor sufferer resumed : " I have only to beg. Sir, you will take care that my dear wife and little ones shall have my back pay as soon as possible: I am not many hours for this world." The captain pressed his hand, but could not speak. He hid his face in his handkerchief. "I have done my duty, captain-have I not,

"You have, Tom, you have-and nobly done it," replied the captain, with great emotion. "God bless you !-- I have only one thing more to say " Then addressing one of his comrades, he asked for his haversack, which was immediately handed to him. "I have only one thing to say, captain :" said he, "I have not been very well this week, Sir, and did not eat all my rations. I have one biscuit-it is all I possess. You, as well as others, Sir, are without bread; take it for the sake of a poor grateful soldier --take it-take it, Sir, and God be with you-God Almighty be with you !"

The poor, good natured creature was totally exhausted, as he concluded ; he leaned back -cuit, one pound of meat, and a pint of wine were his eyes grew a dull glassy colour-his face still served out to each individual; and upon this paler, and he expired in about ten minutes after,

He was wrapped up in his blanket just as he cally, that it lasted nearly three days; and some was, and laid in the earth. The captain himself read a prayer over his grave, and pronounced a as to have extended it to four. But, on the short, but impressive eulogy on the merits of the other hand, the greatest number were men of departed. He showed the men the biscuit, as he related to them the manner in which it had tasted the end of their rations on the second day been given to him, and he danlared he would after possession. AUSTRIA AND NAPLES.

The Austrians evacuate the kingdom of Naples; they depart from it after having completely attained the object of their expedition. The Government, restored by them, has paid all the expenses of the ar mament and the residence; it has fed, clothed, lodged for five years the troops of its powerful protector, Austria, which has thus enjoyed the precious advantage for a military monarchy overwhelmed in debt. of being able to maintain, free of expense, a standing army of 50,000 men, always disposable at its will. Thus Austria has found in the occupation of Naples a means of extending her influence and relieving her Treasury : it must also be confessed that, from the beginning, she had restrained the force of those reactionary passions, and imposed a curb upon the ardor for a counter revolution. She perceived that delivered the rations above mentioned, we had a public tranquility was to be had only at this price; order was necessary for the establishment of the public credit, of which Naples stood very much in need, to defray the expenses of the war and of the occuthey used to sally upon our pickets in a most pation. It is necessary to interfere thus, or else not to interfere at all. Paris Paper.
