The State vs. John W. Grant, indicted for the murder of Jas. P. Carbray.

This case was tried at the last Superior Court for the county of Caswell, and the following is a summary of the trial.

John Mitchell, a boy of about 13 years of age, proved, that on Friday evening, the 29th of June last, he and two other smaller boys were returning from school, which was kept by the deceased; on their way home they saw the prisoner standing on the side of the road leaning against a tree, and his horse saddled, close by him. He said to them, you are late coming from school; he then got on his horse and asked him to give him, (the prisoner,) his gun, which sat by the tree. He gave him the gun and the prisoner went on the road towards the school house. The witness and the other little boys had gone about 150 yards, when they heard a gun fire and some person halloo; they immediately ran back and at the fork of the road, in about 30 yards of the house in which a free negro lived by the name of Toney, they found the deceased lying on the ground dead, and in a few minutes after they got to the place, Mr.
Hindexter and others came to the place.

Watson Poindester stated, that on that evening just before sun set, he heard a gun fire and some person halloo; he was then called to by some of the family of Toney to come to the house, he living but a few hundred yards from the place. He went, and found the deceased lying on his face on the ground dead. He followed his tracks from the fork road about 50 or 70 yards down the road in direction where the deceased lived, and saw the place where he turned in the road and ran back to the place where he fell. The deceased was shot in the left side with a number of shot and also in his left arm. Saw the track of a horse on the road near where the deceased turned in the road.

B. C. West, met the prisoner in the road, leading by Lin's old field westwardly, in the morning about 9 or 10 o'clock, in company with Matthew Mills. He had then had no gun with him. As the witness returned in the evening, he met the prisoner about 2 1/2 or 3 miles from the place where the deceased was killed, going on horse back nearly in half speed; he had a gun, and the witness spoke to him and called him by name, but the prisoner only nodded his head.
The witness went on to the place where the deceased was lying, and that evening and next morning, he being in the inquest held over the body, he examined it particularly. The body received upwards of twenty large shot, and one piece nearly opposite to the heart, there was a large hole in which he could run his finger; the left was also much wounded with shot. He examined the track of the deceased from the fork road, about 70 steps along the road in direction of the place where the deceased boarded; saw where he turned in the road and come back to the place where he fell; saw blood along the road near the tracks. He saw the appearance of the tracks of a horse where he was tied, and also the tracks of some person, about 15 or 20 feet from the tracks in the road where the deceased turned about. The tracks of the horse and man were at a place behind a fence on the road, so situated that neither the horse or person could be discovered by a person coming along the road travelled by deceased. He saw the tracks of the horse from that place into the road the prisoner was travelling when he met him.

Depsha M'Clarney, a little girl, was returning home from school on the same evening & was going along the road directly west of Toney's house, and when she got about 2 or 300 yards from it, she heard a gun and some person cry out 'the Lord have mercy on me.' She then heard other halloing, and shortly after that, the prisoner came up the road after them about half speed on horse back, with a gun in his hand. As he passed by her and some other children, he said, 'I have killed the scoundrel that broke me.' Who, said she, Mr. Grant, and he replied 'never mind, you will hear,' and continued to ride on.
She and some of the other children immediately ran back to the place where the deceased lay in the road, when she got there the little boy, John Mitchell, had got to the place, and the deceased was dead.

Henry A. Burton, the coroner, examined the body and the tracks in the road and near the corner of the fence on the side of the road and he and other witnesses supported the facts stated by B. C. West.

The counsel for the state then offered in evidence, the examination of the prisoner, and proved, by the clerk who wrote it at the request of the justices, before the prisoner was examined, that his confession had been taken down word for word as delivered by the prisoner. The examination was proven by all the justices who sat upon the examination, and that before it was commenced the prisoner was informed by one of the justices, that he was not obliged to make any acknowledgement or confession upon the subject; but it was incumbent on the state to prove the charge if it could.

In the examination, the prisoner stated that he had killed Carbray with a gun, which he had concealed near the place on the evening before, with a determination to kill on the evening he did, if he could not succeed in effecting a compromise, and finding he could not do it, he had gone to the place where he lay in wait for him and shot him.

On the part of the prisoner it was insisted, that at the time he killed the deceased he was insane, and several witnesses were called to testify as to the fact. Two of the witnesses stated, that they thought they had discovered in conversations, that when he spoke of the unfortunate difference between himself and his wife, which was his chief subject of conversation, he did not talk as well as he did on other subjects; but that upon other subjects he displayed as much accuracy and as much good sense as he had ever done.
Upon the cross examination, they stated that they could not say that they had ever seen him at any time out of his senses, or so deranged in his mind, that he did not know good from evil, and perfectly well what he had said and done.

Several witnesses were called by the state, who had known the prisoner in years, had seen him frequently since the controversy between a him and his wife, and since the last Court: all of whom testified that they never had seen or known any acts, or conversations accompanied with acts of his, showing a state of insanity.

The Solicitor General being indisposed and unable to attend the trial, the prosecution was conducted by Mr. Yancey. The prisoner not having employed counsel, the court assigned James T. Morehead, esq. as counsel for him, who had previously, at the request of the prisoner, examined his case. Considerable difficulty was experienced in getting a jury; many having been set aside on account of having formed and expressed an opinion on the case, and the prisoner having challenged a number. Eleven jurors were obtained on Thursday and the other one shortly after the meeting of the court on Friday.

The case was argued by the counsel at some length, and Judge Strange in an eloquent and forcible manner summed up the evidence and stated the law in the case to the jury. The jury retired, and in about five minutes returned a verdict of 'Guilty of Murder.'

On Saturday morning the prisoner was brought to the Bar, and being asked by the Court, what he had to say, why sentence of death should not be pronounced against him, he addressed the court and audience for several minutes, in which he declared that he had no cause of complaint against the Court, Jury or Counsel, in the trial of the cause; that if he had been on the jury himself, he would have been compelled to have given the same verdict they had given. He stated that at the time he committed the murder he was enraged with passion—that he scarcely knew what he had done. He had, however, offended against the laws of the country and must die—he had nothing to say or ask as to the length of time to be given him before the day of execution—that he would leave with the court.

The Judge then, in a most eloquent and feeling address, advised the prisoner, to prepare for death—his crime was of such a nature and accompanied with such aggravated circumstances, that he could not expect executive clemency.
Few addresses of the kind were ever more feelingly made. Scarcely a dry eye was to be found in a crowded Court House. The day of execution was fixed on the 7th of December.

Thus ends the life of this wretched and unfortunate man, J. W. Grant. For many years he lived a happy and prosperous life with his family. He had by his wife six promising children, and had accumulated for them a decent competency. He might now have been in the same happy condition, had he not unfortunately given way to a mean and unfounded jealousy of his wife's virtue. His jealousies upon this subject had undergone a judicial investigation at the last Superior Court of this county, and resulted in the acquittal of his wife of the charge, to the satisfaction of all who heard the trial. In the progress of this trial, the schemes of Grant to impeach his wife, and his attempts to suborn witnesses to swear against her and expose her virtue, was so fully developed, that he became desperate, and made threats against the lives of James Carbray and Nicholas Wilkerson, two of the witnesses examined against him. These threats being made appear to the court, he was bound in a large sum of money to keep the peace towards them, and actually gave security to that effect.

On the evening he killed Carbray, he went to the house of Wilkerson and shot him in his bed at the distance of 10 feet. He then went to another house to kill one of the witnesses against him, whom he had attempted to suborn; he not being at home, escaped. He then went to the house of his father-in-law for the purpose of killing his wife, and as he has since told, actually got into the house in which his wife usually slept, who was accidentally absent on that night at the house of a neighbor, or she must have fallen a victim to his rage. May his fate be a warning to others who give themselves up a victim to the unhallowed passion of jealousy.

FOR SALE

A valuable Plantation in Wake

THAT valuable Farm, lately known by the name of West-Hill, lying on both sides of Swift & Williams's Creeks, adjoining the Plantation of Governor Branch, about nine miles from Raleigh, on the Road to Haywood, settled originally by Joseph Lane, the Grandfather of the late occupant of that name, at a time when farmers had choice of the best lands in the country.
The whole Tract of land contains Two Thousand Two Hundred and Twenty acres—near 1200 of which is prime land—a considerable portion of it fine low grounds. The residue is well-wooded long-leaved Pine Land, and is supposed to afford the best range for cattle and hogs in the county. The farm under cultivation is between 3 and 400 acres, on which there is a tolerably good Dwelling-House, and other out-buildings, on as handsome and healthful a site as can be found in the county, or perhaps in the State. There is a small Grist-Mill, which is convenient for family and neighborhood purposes.
The farm is in good order, and that and the land may be viewed, on application to Mr. Thomas Howell, on the premises; and the terms of sale, which will be accommodating, will be made known on application to J. Gales.

NEWMAN'S

CELEBRATED PATENT GRIST MILL.

The Runner at the Bottom

A PATENT having been issued by the President of the United States, to Edward Newman, for his valuable improvement on the Grist Mill, the subscriber is fully authorized and empowered to make sale of Rights for using a single Mill, or the Rights for using said Mills in any County, or in any State in the Union, except Louisiana.

Persons wishing to purchase Rights, can direct their letters to Samuel Morehead, Postmaster, Martinville, Guilford, N. C. and they will be immediately attended to.
The superior advantages of this Mill, consist in the grinding being done so near the centre, where the power is applied—the small size of the stones,—and the application of pressure to supply the absence of weight. The running stone is placed on the spindle, and facing upwards to be bed stone, which is permanently fixed. The ressure is applied to the centre of the runner, and the grain introduced into the mill through the eye of the bed or top stone.

The simple construction of this Mill, its great durability and cheapness, and its convenience and usefulness to all persons having large families and stock, and the facility with which animal or water power can be applied, have given it the decided preference over all the inventions of this kind, with persons who can judge such things correctly. SAMUEL MOREHEAD,

PROSPECTUS

SOUTHERN AGRICULTURALIST.

THE want of a work to which our Planters could refer for information, relative to the Agriculture of the Southern section of the Union has long been felt, and has long been submitted to as a necessary evil, for which no remedy was at hand. With a sufficiency of talents and of enterprise, to conduct experiments, to draw inferences, and to detail them, yet have we presented to the world, the spectacle of a high minded and enterprising agricultural community, destitute of original agricultural works, & depending solely on oral communications, or Foreign publications, for all our knowledge on these subjects.
Whilst others have carefully collected and recorded the experience of their practical Farmers, we have permitted the hard-earned knowledge of our fathers to perish with them. Whilst others have been straining every nerve in the cause, we have been mere lookers on. Whilst they have advanced rapidly, we have been stationary, or at best have progressed but slowly.
From what cause has arisen the vast superiority of the North over the South in all which relates to Agriculture? Has it been that they alone have turned their attention to the subject, that they alone have made experiments and profited by them? Not so.—The Planters of the South have been as enterprising and as active in their researches, as those of the North. But whilst the discoveries made by the latter are brought immediately into notice, by their periodical publications, those of the former are known but to few, for want of a proper vehicle of communication.
Hence it has been that their improvements have been more rapid than ours, and that we are at this day so deficient in this branch of knowledge.
Such being the case, does it not become our Planters to come forward and assist in the present undertaking, and contribute from time to time such information as may be of service to the community. This work will be divided into three parts. Part 1st, Original—Part 2d, Selections and Reviews—Part 3d, Agricultural Information.
Part 1st will contain all Original Essays on Agriculture, Horticulture, Botany, Rural Affairs, and Domestic Economy. Not only the present staple articles of the South will be attended to, but also the introduction of new objects of Culture, such as the Grape Vine, Olive, Capers, Tea, Sugar Cane, Silk Worm and others, which have yet been untried, and of course not known how they may be cultivated. Only that branch of Horticulture will be for the present attended to, which relates to the Kitchen Garden. When the proper time shall arrive, we are prepared to give directions for the cultivation of the higher branches.

Part 2d will contain Selections from Foreign Works on the above subjects, so far as they may be applicable to the soil and climate of the Southern section of the Union, or may in some way be of use to our Planters. Reviews of such Works, as may treat of the Agriculture of these States, or such as may either directly or indirectly have an influence on us, will be inserted in this part of the work.

Part 3d will contain brief Agricultural Notices, so that our Planters may not remain ignorant of what is going on, but may have an opportunity of knowing what is done in the different parts of the world in aid of Agriculture. It is hoped, that this knowledge, will be as a spur to our enterprise, and cause us also to make fresh exertions. Here also will be inserted a list of Agricultural, Horticultural and Botanical Works, & occasionally some notice will be taken of their contents. Advertisements of Agricultural Works and Implements, or any other which may interest the Planters generally, will be published on a separate sheet, and attached to each number.

We hope all such as are favourably disposed to the work will assist us in contributing to its pages, and also in procuring subscribers for it.— We request, all who are disposed to contribute, to forward to us their communications as early as possible. Those who have made experiments with Grape Vines, Olives, Silk Worms, or any other articles new to our States, or can give any information relative to them, we particularly solicit to communicate what they may know on the subject.

TERMS.

This work will be printed on good paper, and in the octavo size; at Five Dollars per annum,

Public Meeting.

ALL the Citizens of Franklin opposed to the Elevation of Gen. Jackson, to the Presidency, also those in favor of the elevation of John Quincy Adams, are requested to convene at the Court House at Louisburg, on Saturday, the 1st of December next, for the purpose of choosing one or more Delegates, to meet at Raleigh, on the 20th December next, a Convention of Delegates, from other counties of the State, and assist in forming an Electoral Ticket, adverse to the pretensions of the Military Candidate.

In opposing the ambitious views of Gen. Jackson, we, as a part of the Citizens of the Republic, deny the charge of ingratitude so often reiterated in our ears, by the General's advocates.
We are grateful to the General for his military services to the country—we think they have deservedly placed him high on the list of the present warriors of the age; and had he suitable qualifications, we should rejoice to see him promoted to the first office in the Republic.

But we are unwilling to gratify even an innocent ambition, by soiling with our own and the civil liberties of the people. A Military President, as an example, is fraught with danger; and were it not, we could not conscientiously aid in advancing to the Chief Magistracy of this Nation, a man, the whole tenor of whose actions in public and private life, acknowledged, as no law but his own impetuous will.

Friends of Republican Freedom in Franklin, and throughout the State, will you sleep when the chains of domestic Tyranny are forging for you and your posterity? Will you slumber, while History a sure guide in the affairs of Republics, points with unvarying steadiness, with awful certainty to approaching ruin! Through the well meant but misguided zeal of a portion of your fellow-citizens, your own and their liberties are in peril. Awake from your lethargy, make one manly effort, and you will avert the impending danger, and as much as in you lies, insure the safety of the future.
