FIDELITY.

Every one must recollect the tragical story of young Emmet the Irish Patriot; it was too touching to be soon forgotten. During the troubles in Ireland he was tried, condemned, and executed on a charge of treason. His fate made a deep impression on public sympathy. He was so young; so intelligent; so generous; so brave; so every thing that we are apt to like in a young man. His conduct under trial, too, was so lofty and intrepid. The noble indignation with which he repelled the charge of treason against his country; the eloquent vindication of his name; and his pathetic appeal to posterity in the hopeless hour of condemnation; all these entered deeply into every generous bosom, and even his opponents lamented the stern policy that dictated his execution.

But there was one heart whose anguish it would be impossible to describe. In happier days and fairer fortunes he had won the affections of a beautiful & interesting girl, the daughter of the late celebrated Irish barrister, (Curran).—She loved him with the disinterested fervor of woman's first and early love. When every worldly maxim arrayed itself against him; when blasted in fortune, and disgrace and danger darkened around his name, she loved him the more ardently because of his sufferings. Since his fate could awaken the sympathy even of his foes, what must have been the agony of her, whose soul was occupied by his image?—Let those tell who have had the portals of the tomb suddenly closed between them and the being they most loved on earth; who have sat at its threshold, as one shut out in a cold and lonely world, whence all that was lovely and loving had departed.

To render her widowed situation more desolate she had incurred her father's displeasure by her unfortunate attachment; and was an exile from the paternal roof. But could the sympathy and kind offices of friends have reached a spirit so shocked and driven in by horror, she would have experienced no sort of consolation, for the Irish are a people of quick and generous sensibilities. The most delicate and cherishing attentions were paid her by families of wealth and distinction. She was led into society and all kinds of occupation and amusement to dissipate her grief, and wean her from the tragical story of her love, but it was all in vain! There are some strokes of calamity that scathe and scorch the very soul; that penetrate to the vital seat of happiness, and blast it, never again to put forth bud or blossom. She never objected to frequent the haunts of pleasure; but she was as much alone there as in the depths of solitude. She walked about in a sad reverie, apparently unconscious of the world around her. She carried with her an inward woe, that mocked all the blandishments of friendship, and heeded not the song of the charmer—charm he ever so wisely.

The person, says the eloquent author of the sketch book who told me her story, had seen her at a masquerade. After strolling through the splendid rooms and giddy crowd, with an air of utter abstraction, she sat herself down on the steps of an orchestra, and looking about for some time with a vacant air, that shewed her insensibility to the gay scene, she began with the capriciousness of a sickly heart to warble a little plaintive air. She had an exquisite voice; but on this occasion it was so simple, so touching, it breathed forth such a soul of wretchedness, that she drew a crowd mute and silent around her, and melted every one into tears.

The story of one so true and tender, could not but excite great interest in a country remarkable for enthusiasm. It completely won the heart of a brave officer, who paid his addresses to her, and thought that one so true to the dead, could not but prove affectionate to the living. She declined his attentions, for her thoughts were irretrievably engrossed by the memory of her former lover. He solicited not her tenderness but her esteem. He was assisted by her conviction of his worth, and her sense of her own destitute and dependent situation, for she was existing on the kindness of friends. In a word he at length succeeded in gaining her hand, though with the solemn assurance that her heart was unalterably another's.

He took her with him to Sicily, hoping that a change of scene, might wear out the remembrance of early woes. She was an amiable and exemplary wife, and made an effort to be a happy one; but nothing could cure the silent melancholy that had entered into her very soul. She wasted away in a slow but hopeless decline, and at last sunk into the grave, the victim of a broken heart.

It was on this lady, Moore composed the following lines.

She is far from the land where her young hero sleeps,
And lovers around her are sighing;
But coldly she turns from her gaze and weeps,
For her heart in his grave is lying.

She sings the wild songs of her dear native plains,
Every note which he lov'd awaking;
Ah! little they think, who delight in their strains,
How the heart of the minstrel is breaking!

He had lived for his love—for his country he died,
They were all that to life had entwined him.
Nor soon shall the tears of his country be dried,
Nor long will his love stay behind him!

Oh! make her a grave where the sunbeams rest,
When they promise a glorious morn;
They'll shine o'er her sleep, like a smile from the west,
From her own loved Island of sorrow!

SUFFERINGS OF THE GREEKS.

Sophia Constantino was the wife of an officer of distinction who fell during the siege of Missolonghi. When the Turks entered the town she was among the crowd which sought to escape the fury of the enemy by quitting the walls, accompanied by her son and daughter. They had not proceeded far when the mother perceived a party of Turks coming towards them: horrified at the fate which was about to befall her daughter, a beautiful girl of sixteen, she turned to the son, who was armed, and told him to shoot his sister, lest she should become a victim of Mussulman brutality. The youth instantly obeyed the dreadful mandate, drew a pistol from his girdle, and lodged its contents, four large slugs, in his sister's head, when she fell to the ground, apparently a lifeless corpse. Thus relieved from a charge which the mother could not preserve, herself and son endeavored to take refuge in a cavern. Just as they were entering it a grape shot struck the boy in the leg, and he also fell. Scarcely had the mother succeeded in dragging him after her than a piquet of Turkish cavalry came up; one of the party drawing forth a pistol, pointed it at the temple of poor Sophia, who, suddenly rising up, looked sternly at the Turk and exclaimed, "Barbarian, do you not see that I am a woman?" This had the desired effect, and both the mother and her son were spared to be conducted into slavery. The most extraordinary part of this story remains to be told. Being among the two hundred ransomed by the Continental Greek Committees, they were sent over to this island, and placed with the others. Judge of the mother's astonishment on finding that her imaginary murdered daughter was among the number! To be brief, on perceiving she was a female, the Turks carried her back to Missolonghi, bound up her wounds, which had all the appearance of being mortal, but she recovered, and her story having attracted the attention of the ransoming agents, the interesting Cressida was rescued from bondage, and, what is more, thus singularly destined to be once more restored to the arms of her disconsolate parent.

PROSPECTUS

A SCHOOL

For the Education of Boys,
To be established at New-Haven, Connecticut,
By Serenio E. Dwight & Henry E. Dwight.

WE propose in the ensuing spring, to establish at New-Haven, a School for the Education of Boys to be called the New-Haven Gymnasium: and have engaged the large and commodious building, originally intended as a Steam-boat Hotel, with the adjacent grounds. The house is one mile from the college, and three-fourths of a mile from the centre of the town; and commands a fine view of the New-Haven valley, and the surrounding mountains, of the harbor, the Sound, and Long-Island.

New-Haven, as a place of moderate size and great salubrity, as distinguished for the beauty of its site and environs, the neatness of its buildings and grounds, and the richness of its foliage, and as presenting a state of society in a high degree moral, enlightened and polished, is a favored seat of education. It is within eight hours travel from New-York, and within less than twenty-four from Boston, Albany and Philadelphia, and has a direct communication with every part of the United States.

The proposed institution in its general plan, is intended to resemble the Round Hill School, at Northampton; the proprietors of which, for having introduced the Gymnasium into this country with so much talent and success, deserve the thanks of the friends of literature, as they do ours also, for the frankness and cordiality with which they have seconded our design.

We propose, with the boys, to occupy the house as a family, to take the entire charge of them, and to stand in the place of their parents. The government of the institution will be at once strict and parental. The boys, unless on special occasions, will not be allowed to leave the grounds, except in company with a teacher or guardian. They will be permitted to contract no debt, and to make no purchases for themselves. It is intended to have them always, in effect, under our own eye, and to fill up their time with study and useful recreation.

Wishing to form the character from an early period, and not to be responsible for habits and a character formed elsewhere, we propose to receive boys of the age of six, and to decline (unless in peculiar cases) commencing with any after the age of fourteen.

A part of each day is to be regularly devoted to Gymnastic exercises. These with other active employments, are the best means of preserving the health and invigorating the constitution. Assiduous attention will be paid to the subject of manners.

As some boys are designed for college, and others are not, the course of education will be accommodated, in each case, to the wishes of the parent. Both classes of boys will need instruction in Spelling, Reading, Writing & Drawing, in Declaration and Composition, in Arithmetic and Algebra. Geography, with the aid of the best Books, of Maps, Charts and Globes, is to be pursued as an object of prime importance. Both will also study French, Spanish, German and Italian, under native teachers: and for this end, measures have been taken to procure the assistance of gentlemen of acknowledged talents and character.

The boys preparing for college will likewise be taught Latin, and Greek, with the elements of History, and where it is wished the Hebrew.

The boys not intended for college will, in addition to the above, be taught Latin if the parents consent, Grammar, Rhetoric, and as extensive a course of Mathematics as is desired. They will have the opportunity to receive a regular course of instruction in Botany, History, Logic, Ethics, Mental Philosophy and Political Economy. It is expected also, that those students, who have been sufficiently long in a course of education, and have made the requisite attainments, will be permitted to attend the course of Lectures on Chemistry, Mineralogy, and Geology, by Professor Silliman; and the course of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy, by Professor Olmsted.

The religious instruction of the pupils will be parental. The great aim will be to train them up in the fear of God. Each day will begin and end with reading the Scriptures and Prayer. The Bible will be a class-book on the Sabbath; and the pupils will attend Church at the place designated by their parents.

This is our general plan; we shall aim to execute it with fidelity; reserving, however, the right of making such alterations as experience shall show to be necessary. With the subject of education, we are not wholly unacquainted. One of us has been occupied for a considerable period, in a course of collegiate instruction. Both of us have had the privilege of surveying many of the principal seminaries of Europe; and one of us, during a long residence in Germany, has examined, with the utmost attention and care, the system of education pursued in several of her Universities, and in her Academic and Commercial Gymnasiums.

There will be two vacations in a year, each of three weeks; the first to commence on the first Wednesday of May; the other, on the second Wednesday of September. During both, the boys may remain at the school, without additional expense.

We shall have a valuable library of the best authors in English, Latin, Greek, French, Spanish, Italian, and German.

The annual charge for boys of ten years and over, is three hundred dollars, payable quarterly in advance; but a deduction will be made where two or more come from one family, at the same time. The charge for boys under ten, is two hundred and fifty dollars. In this sum are comprehended all charges for instruction, including the tickets for the college lectures, board, washing and mending, room, fuel, lights and furniture, except a bed or mattress and bed clothing to be furnished by the pupil. These may be procured on the spot, at a fair price. Where it is wished, the clothing of the boys can be procured by us, and on terms advantageous to the parent. It is intended to open the institution on the first of May, 1828.

SERENIO E. DWIGHT,
HENRY E. DWIGHT.

Letters addressed to us at New-Haven, or to H. E. Dwight, previous to the 1st of March next, at Petersburg, Va. will be promptly attended to. New-Haven, Nov. 28, 1827.

The undersigned, being made acquainted with the plan of a Gymnasium, about to be established in this city, by the Rev. S. E. Dwight and H. E. Dwight, Esq. are persuaded of the usefulness of such an institution, and think the situation of the building, the accommodations, which it afords, and the means of instruction which they design to provide, suited in every respect, to the object in view. The well known character of these gentlemen, and the opportunities which they have enjoyed of witnessing the best modes of instruction in Europe, furnish the surest pledge to the public, for the faithful and successful execution of the plan proposed.
