IMAGINARY INVALIDS.

"Chamomile tea, Mrs. Crosby, if you please," said Mr. Crosby: "I have had five pints of water gruel since bed time. I cannot bear any more."

"Just as you choose, my angel," said Mrs. Crosby. "Caroline, dear, run before, and shut down the windows in the breakfast parlour. Your papa is going down."

Caroline flew to obey her mother's mandate.

"I'll take a little ether," said Mr. Crosby, "before I go out; for I have had a few slight touches of flying gout during the night, Mrs. Crosby."

"Indeed, my life," said the lady, "I can assure you I have not suffered a little myself—an attack of my old peripneumony did not mellow the pains of my lumbago. Nor am I quite easy about my erysipelas."

"Come, dearest," said the invalid husband, "lend me your arm—ring for Richard, to put the pillows in my chair—bring down the book, and let's see what's to be done next."

And in this order of march, proceeded Mr. and Mrs. Crosby to the breakfast parlour, which had been previously hermetically sealed by the assiduity of Caroline.

It was July—the tea urn steamed upon the table, the room had a southern aspect, and the sun shone full into it—Mr. Crosby had just taken ether, and his lady had just been rubbed with Steers' Opodeldoc.

Caroline proceeded to do duty at the breakfast table.

"Oh," said Mr. Crosby, as he sat down—what a sudden pain at the back of my head."

"Gracious me!" cried Mrs. Crosby, "at the back of your head, my life?—a leading symptom of apopleptic tendency."

"And my feet are cold, hot as the weather is," continued Mr. Crosby.

"When the extremities are chilled, Caroline," muttered Mrs. Crosby to her daughter in law, "the book says death is approaching."

"Yes," said Caroline, half smiling, "towards the end of a long and wearing disorder, but not surely in papa's state of health."

"Health! child," exclaimed Mr. Crosby, "why neither that suffering angel, nor myself, have had half an hour's health since—since—"

"Since," interrupted Caroline, "you have devoted yourself to the study of Buchanan; indeed, my dear father, that book of fate should not be opened by the world at large."

"Tis an admirable book, child," said Mrs. Crosby, "and although it is the fashion to laugh at it now, it has saved us hundreds of guineas, which we else should have paid to the physicians."

"And cost you thousands which you have paid to the apothecaries," said Caroline. "Only hear what cousin William says about it."

"Who quotes me?" exclaimed cousin William, opening the door.

"I," said Caroline, and her bright eyes sparkled, as her young and elegant cousin made his appearance—"upon the subject of that odious book."

"What," said the young guardsman, "making fresh war upon the Buchanans?"

"William," said Mr. Crosby, "you may call us what you please, but the discovery of our disorders in time, tends to the salvation of the constitution."

"Truly so, my dear uncle," said Capt. Morley, "provided you do discover them; but since disorders generally begin with fever, the incipient symptoms of all must naturally more or less resemble each other; and thus fancy, which, like conscience, 'doth make cowards of us all,' ekes out the rest of the prognostics, and we think ourselves suffering under a combination of ills, by which, in fact, we are not in the slightest degree assailed."

"Look at Caroline's cheek, William," said Mrs. Crosby, "what do you think of the flush which you see upon it at this moment?"

"Think!" said Morley, "that it rivals the virgin rose."

"Oh, William!" said Caroline.

"There," exclaimed her mother, "see, she flushes still more."

"Health, pure health, by the gods!" exclaimed the Captain, "heightened by native modesty."

"Health!" says Mrs. Crosby, "how can you talk such nonsense, William?—why, the child's pulse is at seventy—health—health—are you hot, Caroline?"

"Very hot indeed, mama," said the lovely tea-maker.

"No wonder, aunt," said Morley, "the glass is at ninety-two in the corner of the room farthest removed from the influence of the tea-urn."

"Poor child!" said Crosby, who was reading Buchan, and drinking Dr. Solander's British infusion, "poor Cary—yes—so it is—my angel is right."

"Oh, my dear father," interrupted Caroline, "do not make yourself uneasy about me. I assure you I am in perfect health: but you make me laugh with your too anxious fears, so that I can hardly eat my breakfast."

"Difficulty of swallowing," sighed Mrs. Crosby, "is a most alarming symptom."

And so, if I choose, might I indulge my reader with scenes—fifty such dialogues, which occurred at meal times, the only periods at which the family met, and so it was, that owing to their addiction to Dr. Buchan, this once happy couple moped and pined their lives away in a dull house in the dulllest part of Cambridgeshire, unenlivened by visitors, whose habits and amusements might, they apprehended, interfere with the regimen and medicine absolutely necessary, as they thought, to their existence, secluded from society and its innocent gaieties by the fear either of catching colds or fever, or surfeits, or over feeding, or over exercising themselves; nor amongst the other agreements of their seclusion should it be forgotten, that the physic closet was situated at the head of the great staircase, and flavoured the whole internal atmosphere, which never had an opportunity of escaping, except indeed through the windows of Caroline's boudoir, the only apertures ever open for its egress after the family were up for the day.

NOTICE.

THE Surviving Officers of the Revolutionary Army, who received commutation certificates, and the Surviving non-commissioned Officers and Soldiers of that Army, (not on the pension list) who received certificates for the promised reward of eighty dollars, for enlisting for the war, and continuing in the service until its termination, are requested, respectively, as soon as may be possibly convenient, to send their names, and the names of the places where their nearest post offices are kept, by letter addressed to Colonel Aaron Ogden, at the City of Washington, who will be there ready to receive them. State Bank of North-Carolina,

May 20, 1828.

THE President and Directors of this Institution have determined to circumscribe the extent of their Business, by calling in gradually a portion of their outstanding Debt—by declining, for the present, to make any new Loans on accommodation paper, and thus curtail the amount of their Notes in circulation.

The better to effect this object, and to sustain the credit of the Bank, they have determined to make no Dividend of the Profits for the last six months, but make use of them, with such other means as they can command, for procuring such available funds as shall, in future, enable them to meet more promptly, demands which may be made upon the Institution.

The Board are aware that this determination will bear hardly upon many Stockholders; but when they are informed that the measure is deemed necessary to insure the future prosperity of the Bank, they will generally, it is believed, approve of the course adopted.

Had the Board been less indulgent to the debtors of the Bank, it would not now be necessary to withhold a Dividend from the Stockholders; and by hereafter requiring regular instalments from their dealers, it is hoped a like necessity will not again recur.

A BARGAIN.

THE Subscriber being desirous of removing to the West, offers for sale the tract of Land on which he lives, situated in the county of Granville, and lying on the waters of Grassy and Jonathan Creeks, 8 miles south of Roanoke, and 17 north of Oxford. It contains between 18 and 1900 acres, 6 or 700 of which are cleared, in a good state for cultivation, and well adapted to the growth of Corn, Wheat, Oats, Cotton and Tobacco. There are about 150 or 200 acres of low grounds—of the high land, seven or eight hundred acres contiguous to the dwelling, inferior to none in this section of country, with 10 or 15 constant Springs. The improvements are extensive. The dwelling house is among the largest, most roomy, and in every respect the most convenient in the county. It is new, and built of the very best materials, beautifully situated on a gentle eminence, overlooking a large extent of country. The out-houses of every kind are also new, and in a style accommodated to the dwelling house. Within half a mile of the Dwelling, are a Saw and Grist Mill and Cotton Gin. This Grist Mill yields 1000 bushels of Corn, and 150 or 200 bushels of Wheat per annum. A ready sale may always be made of the proceeds of the Saw Mill. It contains an extensive Orchard, with a great variety of select fruits. The tract is situated in the centre of a neighborhood, which for health, wealth, intelligence, morals, and every social consideration, gives place to none in the State. The Subscriber forbears a more minute description of the above tract, as those wishing to purchase are expected to view it and judge for themselves. The terms will be low and accommodating.
