The Cabinet .- Various rumors are afloat as to the individuals most likely to be selected by General Jacksonin the formation of his Cabinet. Amongst the most will stand at my Stable prominent, we perceive the names of several distinguished members of Congress. Unless the General's opinions have undergone a radical change, he cannot with any claim to consistency, call to his aid the 15th of July; and will be let to mares at the lin the Cabinet, any member of either House. When he resigned his seat in the Senate of the United States, he accompanied his resignation with some remarks the market prices. We shall see in a few days, how his appointments tally with his recorded declarations.

From a Circular addressed to his constituents, by the Hon. John BRYAN, we perceive with sorrow, that he declines serving them any longer as their Representative in Congress. But few members, whose tour of duty has been so short, her a high station on the turf; and the races of have occupied so enviable an eminence at Washington, as Mr. Bryan; and but few will carry with them into retirement, so general an expression of regret at their departure.

I have never seen in all the discussions in the Legislative Assemblies of the States, or of the Union, such a clear development of the true principles of Banking as is exhibited in this luminous speech. I know not which to admire most, his history of their past transactions or his advice for their future course. In both, he shows a perfect knowledge of the disease and the remedy. The same results from the same system of Banking have been produced at all times and in all countries; but no Banker ever stopped payment, whose payments came in as fast as his notes went out."

The Southern Review (a well conducted Work recently established in Charleston) in an able Review of these Reports, corroborates the fact of the superior excellence of these Hones, by stating, that an old friend of the Reviewers, an Engraver, who has for many years been engaged in the use of tools, and who is particularly exact and careful of his instruments, has often assured them, that the very best Hone he to forgive them." ever used or saw, came from this State, and was given to him by a stranger passing through Charleston. Yet so little has the attention of our Southrons been directed to such objects, it was never in his power to learn where this Hone had been quarried, nor in what direction he could apply for information. Whilst Charleston has been supplied with coarse and inferior Hones from Canada, New-York, Vermont and Connecticut, the very existence of these Quarries in our State, was, until the publication of Mr. Olmsted's Reports, considered problematical, and it has never yet been possible to obtain in the city of Charleston, a fragment of this Slate for a Mineralogical Specimen! We have no doubt it would prove a profitable business to any one who would undertake to prepare these valuable Hones for market.

Culture of Silk .- Mr. Martindale has reported in the House of Representatives a bill to grant the public land at Greenbush in New-York, to Jacob B. Clarke, to aid him in rearing the Mulberry tree, preparatory to the culture of silk. It appears from the review taken in this report of the trade in bread-stuffs, the exports of this article have fallen off nearly fifteen millions since 1817, when they amounted to $20,347,000. whereas in 1827, they amounted to $5,803 The cause of this is, of course, the loss of a market, as our numbers have probably been increased by three millions in the same period. Had the foreign demand continued, our exportation of bread-stuffs would probably have amounted to $26,000 000. The only remedy for this, says the author of the report, is to diversily the pursuits of the farmer, and substitute domestic productions for foreign supplies .-It appears that in the last seven years, the aggregate amount of sitks imported into the United States, was upwards of 50 millions of dollars, of which were re-exported not more than 12,893.858, leaving for the only upon equal terms, for, said hehome market $37,262,798, being an average annual consumption of silk to the amount of 5,323,244. But this is only tune of thirty thousand dollars—you, sir, the amount at invoice prices. — The actual have neither. Therefore, I am compelled amount used by the consumer in that peri- to say, that you must get a fortune of od, at the prices he pays, was 62.880,819, thirty thousand dollars, as hands being an average annual value of $8,982,- charming a wife, and two as fine children 974. To purchase these silks would require as I have, and then if my circumstances $982,974 bushels of wheat, at a dollar a bushel. The value of the single article of raw silk would be annually, it is presumed about $4,498,487 : the subsistence of the manufacturers about $2,245,743; the total, namely, 6,737,230, would constitute the annual value of this market to the agriculture of the United States. Here continues the report, is a domestic market for silk, of nearly double the value of all the foreign markets for our bread-stuffs. One that in the State of New-York, an Officer acre of full mulherry trees will produce $200 worth of silk ; but it would require ten acres of first rate land to produce the same value of wheat. Neither is there any comparison in the quantity and quality of the labour required; the most rubust tabour being necessary for the one, while women & children are put to the business of producing the other. The capacity of the country for the growth of silk cannot be doubted, says Mr. M. the sunableness of the soil and climate is indisputable. It has been cultivated in Virginia and Geor gia and was abandoned only on account of the superior profitableness of tobacco and cotton. In Connecticut five small towns produced in one season nearly two tons and a half of raw silk, valued at a law price at $21,188. In the town of Mansfield, with a population of 2.500 souls, produced 2,440 pounds. This silk is converted into beautiful sewing silk and other valuable manufactures. The mulberry tree may be cultivated in every part of the Union, as it flourishes as high as the latitude of 45°. In the southern country it is indigenous. It is an ornamental tree in hedges, & injures less than the apple-tree the productive powers of the soil. The white mulberry is the best species; but as experiece only can decide which of the other kings will answer, it is recommended by the report to grant the prayer of the petitioner. who purposes to make experiments. A bill to that effect is reported.

It is a very different case, however, in some of the Northern cities. The sleighing has been excellent in Philadelphia and New-York.
